Everyone in New York knows the grudge that Urban Shocker has against the Yanks, but few knew to what extremity he would go to his old teammates, and few realize what a great pitcher he is. Shoeker had won a three-hit vietory over the Yanks in the first game of the series, and he had asked to go back in the last game of the series. He developed a slight case of tonsilitis on the morning of the game, and Fohl didn't want to send him in; but Shocker insisted on giving them another pasting. Fohl asked him to consider that he wasn't in shape and working against doctors' orders 922. and the Yanks might drub him. "I could beat that bunch on crutches," he said. And he did it.
