Acting Mayor Bigelow, the other city commissioners, Chief of Police Jenkins and representatives of numerous clubs, fraternal orders and business organizations are hustling today to complete plans for handling the great throng of visiting Shriners and their families who will arrive in Portland Saturday. A preliminary meeting was held this forenoon in Commissioner Bigelow's office and this is to be followed by a more general meeting late in the afternoon of representatives of organizations that will help in the efforts to get at least 1000 automobiles for the entertainment of the incoming Shriners.

Mayor Baker, now in San Francisco, sent acting Mayor Bigelow this morning the following message: "Two hundred thousand visitors, including families, in San Francisco. We can expect at least 10,000 to return via Portland, a result of Portland's hospitality in 1920; any number of automobiles will stop from 10 to 24 hours. Al Kader temple has invited a number of temples to stop off.

It is up to the city of Portland to maintain her reputation. It is not alone Al Kader's problem; it is the city of Portland's duty to help. Please organize the civic bodies and call upon the citizens generally to furnish automobiles to take our visitors over the highway. It is Portland's opportunity to again make good, and she must not fail. A. L. Tetu, potentate of Al Kader temple, requests all members to assist."

Admiral Henry T. Mayo, who is celebrating 50th anniversary of entrance in Annapolis.

Fifty years ago today a wee small midshipmite entered the United States Naval academy at Annapolis. That midshipman was none other than Admiral Henry T. Mayo, who is now retired, after reaching the highest rank the navy offers, and now lives in Portland.

Monday night the admiral spoke at a meeting of the Portland chapter of the Naval Reserve Officers' association and told of his experiences in the navy. He told of the days of the old navy, when sails were still used; the creation of the "White Navy"; the days of the Spanish war and the uncertain days off the coast of Mexico.

Admiral Mayo, then a rear admiral, was in command at Tampico in 1914, when the Mexican guerillas refused to salute the flag after seizing a boat's crew that was carrying United States mail. He was then made a vice admiral in command of a battleship squadron and in 1918 was made commander in chief of the navy fleet.

In this capacity he served in active command of the Atlantic fleet and nominal command of all ships of the navy until 1919, when he was made head of the general board. ### Miss Woodbury, in Shakespearean Role, Wins Commendation

A large and very appreciative audience greeted Miss Elizabeth Eugenia Woodbury on Friday night at the Little Theatre when she gave an interesting and artistic dramatic interpretation of Shakespeare's play, "Anthony and Cleopatra" as a member of the Portland Shakespeare Study club.

A stage setting of Oriental richness and beauty was arranged for the occasion through the courtesy of the firm of Crayton Bros. The play was augmented by stately palms, huge baskets of variegated iris, shaded lamps and burning incense, which created an atmosphere singularly in keeping with the character of the entertainment.

Miss Woodbury's wonderful artistry as demonstrated by her brilliant rendition of this difficult play will long be remembered with real pleasure by the capacity audience that expressed its appreciation in repeated curtain calls.

Much was heard in praise of the grace and beauty of the Egyptian dances, as interpreted by Imogene Seton, to the music of the Ladies' Columbia symphony orchestra. Her temple dances given in the costume of the vestal virgin, were especially fine. Many exquisite floral tokens of appreciation were presented to the artists by admiring friends.

S. R. Thompson, one of the directors of the Round-Up, recently visited Los Angeles to close negotiations with Mix and a telegraphic message received by Marsh stated that the movie hero would be on hand with a party of 50 experienced men and women who would participate in the program. Mix and his party propose to work out material for a movie drama during the show.

Business and farming conditions are improving rapidly in Umatilla county, Marsh stated, and a soaking rain last week added millions of dollars to the 1922 incomes of Pendleton and vicinity. More than a million bushels of wheat already has been contracted for on a basis of 1921 prices. The fruit crop suffered only slightly from late frosts and the general attitude of the people of the section was decidedly optimistic, according to Marsh.
