Society Turns Out to See Events

By Helen Hutchison

THE social program for today was crowded with festive events. The regatta in the afternoon, when trim yachts, gaily decorated motorboats and other water craft vied with each other for prizes on the Willamette, was witnessed by a large representation of Portland's smart set. The admiral's ball tonight in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Multnomah will be a brilliant spectacle. On this occasion Admiral of the Regatta Roy T. Bishop and his staff will honor the visiting naval officers, the Rosarians and the Rose Festival board. Two other events of importance will occur this evening. The wedding of Miss Miriam Reed to James Forrest Cobb will take place at the First Presbyterian church and Miss Mary Warrack and Lieutenant Wilber M. Lockhart will be married at the Pro-cathedral. Many of the wedding guests will later attend the ball.

* * *

Many prominent members of the social set will be box holders at the "Gymkana" and Floral pageant to be held at the Multnomah field Thursday afternoon. Miss Alice Robertson will be an honor guest. It is rumored that Miss Elsie Janis, the army and navy favorite, will also be an interested spectator.

* * *

A number of the younger set enjoyed a charming little luncheon which Miss Katherine Wells gave Tuesday afternoon at the Ann Davenport tea house. The guest list included the Misses Pauline L'Abbe, Isobel Kerr, Harriet Hawkins, Wilamina Ketterbach of Lewiston, Idaho, Margaret Spencer, Doris Wells and Mrs. W. B. Wells.

One of the gaily decorated automobiles which will be entered in the Rose Festival parade will be that of Mrs. Theodore B. Wilcox, who is entering her car for the Junior league. Miss Irene Daily, Mrs. Cameron Squires, Miss Louise Linthicum, Mrs. Spencer Biddle and Miss Margaret Biddle will ride.

* * *

Mrs. John Ker, who will leave Sunday to visit her sister in Hamburg, Germany, was the honor guest at a jolly little luncheon at the Ann Davenport tea house last week, when Mrs. Gerard Clements entertained for her.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Farrington entertained with a dinner party Tuesday evening for Dr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Hunt of Los Angeles, who are house guests of Mrs. Harry L. Mayhew of Irvington.

* * *

Mrs. H. J. Miller will entertain for Mrs. Evan W. Davis with a bridge luncheon Wednesday. Mrs. Davis has been the motif of many affairs during her brief visit.

* * *

Miss Bertha Maguire is the house guest of Miss Mary Claire Ryan during the Rose Festival. A number of affairs have been planned in her honor.

Mrs. Elliott will entertain informally at bridge Thursday afternoon, additional guests dropping in for tea later.

DRESS

The Gingham Frock

This frock makes it possible to be both smart and comfortable in hot weather, which is the secret of the summer wardrobe. It is made in plain rose gingham, trimmed with bands of rose and white striped gingham. It is cut on chemise lines, with no fastenings of any kind. The narrow girdle of black lacquered ribbon is unattached and ties with long ends.

This same black ribbon, in a narrower width trims the hat.

Woman Solon Is Entertained At Banquet

THE only woman in the United States congress, Miss Alice Robertson, was the honor guest at the annual banquet of the Business Woman's club at the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening. Miss Robertson, who is a member of the national business women's club, made an informal talk, not as the personal representative of President and Mrs. Harding to the Rose Festival, but as one business woman to another. She recounted many little intimate details connected with the life of a congresswoman and gave some inside facts concerning the Shepherd-Towner bill and the bonus bill.

A pleasing musical program was given under the direction of Mrs. Mary Gordon Forbes. Miss Adelia Prichard, president of the club, presided and read the annual report of the club activities. Noteworthy among the civic deeds accomplished by the club was the presentation of a jeweled crown to the Rose Festival committee to be worn by the reigning queen of the annual floral carnival for many years to come. The presentation took place in Laurelhurst park at the coronation ceremonies yesterday. Miss Prichard making the address, assisted by Mrs. Josephine Forney, Mrs. G. J. Frankel and Miss Marie Sommers. Eric Hauser received the crown in the name of Portland and the Rose Festival board.

The following officers were chosen to act for the coming year: Vice president, Miss Bertha McCarthy; secretary, Mrs. Ida V. Doyle; treasurer, Miss Florence Day; auditor, Miss Abbye Bland; directors, Mrs. Elizabeth Barry, Miss Henrietta Kagi, Mrs. Josephine Forney and Miss Bernice Adams. Miss Marie Sommers and Miss Alice Hutchinson were holdovers. Miss Adelia Prichard will continue in the office of president until later in the summer, when her successor will be chosen.

The board of directors of the General Federation of Women's clubs was on record today as favoring birth control and authorized Mrs. Elma Blair, New York, chairman of the welfare department, to start an educational campaign.

According to present plans efforts will be made to have present legal restrictions against the birth control movement removed. Improvement of the species by birth restrictions is hoped for by the federation, according to Mrs. James J. Reed, director from Arkansas.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Wood Mouse Lessons

By Thornton W. Burgess

His place in life he best will earn
Who doth each daily lesson learn.
—Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

THE four children of Whitefoot the Wood Mouse were no longer babies. The time had come for them to begin to venture out into the Great World. Like all healthy little folks, they were full of mischief and delighted to play. But Whitefoot and Mrs. Whitefoot knew that it was time for them to go to school. That is, it was time for them to learn certain things very necessary for a young Wood Mouse to know if he wanted to grow up.

So Whitefoot started in to teach them their first lessons, and what do you think the first one was? It was fear. Yes, sir, it was fear. At first the youngsters were not at all afraid. In all their short lives they never had had a fright. They didn't know what fear was. When they came out of their home to make their first very short journey out in the Great World they were filled with wonder at everything they saw, but they were not afraid. You see, they didn't know enough to be afraid. So the first thing they had to be taught was fear. The more timid a Wood Mouse is the longer he is likely to live.

"Now, children," said Whitefoot very gravely. "You follow me and do exactly what I do. Before we start off I will tell you some things that you should know. In the first place, the Great World is filled with enemies, always seeking a Wood Mouse."

"What for?" asked one of the children.

"To eat," replied Whitefoot so solemnly that each little Wood Mouse shivered clear to the tip of his tail.

"Why should they want to eat us?" another asked.

"Because by certain people a Wood Mouse is considered the finest eating to be found," replied Whitefoot. "There are enemies who will hunt a long, long time and wait very, very patiently to catch a Wood Mouse."

"Who are these dreadful enemies?" a third youngster asked.

Whitefoot stroked his whiskers thoughtfully for a reply. At last he spoke. "I think," said he, "I will tell you first of the enemies to be watched out for in the day time. To begin with, there are the members of the Hawk family."

"What is a Hawk?" piped up the smallest of the children.

"It is a great bird," replied Whitefoot. "There are many members of the family, but they are all alike in their love for a Wood Mouse dinner. They have very wonderful eyes. They can see from a great distance. Some of them sit in the tops of tall trees and watch. When they see a Mouse they swoop down with great speed to seize that Mouse in terrible claws. It takes a quick-moving Mouse to escape them. Sometimes they seem to drop down right out of the sky. You must always be watching for Hawks in the day time.

"Then there is another big fellow," continued Whitefoot. "He is black and he is called Blacky the Crow. He is nearly as big as the Hawks and he doesn't spend much time in hunting for us. But if he should happen to see one of you by chance, he would be very likely to try to catch you. Then there is Buster Bear. He is a terrible big fellow."

"Is he as big as you?" asked the smallest one.

Whitefoot just had to laugh. He was tickled that any one, even one of his own children, should think him big. "Yes," said he, "he is as big as I. In fact he is a thousand times bigger. He is so big that I would hardly make one of his toes."

"Now, children," said Whitefoot very gravely, "you follow me and do exactly what I do."

"Oh-o-o-o!" cried the four little Mice together, and their eyes grew round with wonder and opened very wide.

"Yes," continued Whitefoot, "he is a great giant and you never know when he may come along. He hunts by day and night both. His great claws can tear an old stump to pieces, or dig you out of a hole in the ground. But he is so big that you can see him coming and so he is not as dangerous as a Hawk."

FASHION'S REALM

Paris, June 21.—There is a new ideal for the foulard frocks so popular this summer. It is an idea which carries out that of the other popular favorite, the two-fabric gown. The latest frock is made on the tunic plan, and is deeply banded and hemmed with foulard. The background of the foulard is exactly matched in crepe de chine or georgette, and this material and shade is used for the rest of the gown. With this costume goes a chic little hat—mushroom, of course—of horsehair trimmed with a bow of the foulard.

New York, June 21.—Some of the prettiest nightgowns are those of silk, not always of the lovely flesh shades, but also in cool blues and faint orchids and in a dainty shade of green. The edges are picotted. It is possible today to have whole outfits of underwear in the lovely green and blue shades, from step-in and undervests to costume slips and petticoats. All white underwear is enjoying its summertime vogue, though often in the case of sheer georgette underwear in white there is the tiniest and most delicate spray of tiny rosebuds in pink and pale yellow embroidered on salient corners.

New York, June 21.—For bridesmaids there is a toque much in the shape of a helmet. It is covered with blossoms, as becomes weddings of late June and early July, and fastens under the chin with fetching little straps of silver beads. The season's gown for bridesmaids is the moyenage sort. It is especially effective because it allows of such sumptuous girdles of metal cloth and jewels. With the moyenage gown quaint bracelets and gloves with embroidered gauntlets may also be worn.

Paris, June 21.—Stripes are rising so high in favor that few costumes are complete without a panel or a girdle with the brightest of stripes running up and down or around. Instead of the plain underskirt with which panels have heretofore been supplemented, the thing today is to have an underskirt of some widely striped material. If the striped skirt were worn by itself it would be too gay to be borne. But peeping out now and then between the long petal-like panels of taffeta it is interesting and intriguing in the extreme.

New York, June 21.—Ribbon never was used so extensively nor has it ever been so worthy of use. Some of the exquisite new ribbons have been made into a long and wide garland of roses in pastel shades, intended to be cast round the shoulders of a debutante in intervals between dances. There is a ribbon petal collar for use on a summer evening cloak, the collar being made wholly of petals in orchid ribbon. One frock for a young girl has a bodice made altogether of ribbon loops.

A large choir sang music composed for the occasion. A message of greeting was sent to the king and queen of Sweden.

Girls 'Squeal' When Man Refuses Bail

"Bobby" Wilson and "Kitty" Johnson were arrested Monday night for alleged bootlegging. They sent their attorney to Tony Kothakis, night clerk at the New Royal hotel, for bail Tuesday. Tony gave the attorney a curt answer, which made the girls angry and they "squealed." They had been peddling moonshine for a living, they said, the moonshine supplied by Kothsakis. Kothsakis, James Pappas and George Takes were arrested in a raid on the hotel after the girls had told their story.

A small amount invested in a good pair of glasses will give you an immense amount of relief.
