THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1922.

During the lull of a quiet school board meeting Wednesday night, R. H. Thomas, clerk and business manager for 14 years, read a communication from himself, announcing that he is not a candidate to succeed himself, and asking to be relieved of the responsibilities of his office August 1. Director George B. Thomas, who has been the prime factor in a movement to oust the clerk, immediately moved

of the Pacific Northwest's commercial history

NDELIBLY inscribed in the handwriting of those who witnessed and helped to promote the advancement of the Pacific Northwest, is the story of Ladd & Tilton Bank, the first financial institution in the Pacific Northwest territory. Today another chapter is being added, for Ladd & Tilton Bank, the pioneer, is passing its sixty-third milestone.

History makes the Future-

Based on the historical past in which Ladd & Tilton Bank has been such an influence will be the history-making events of the future. And coincident with the progress of this territory is that of the entire United States. With much interest, therefore, is the whole nation viewing the great industrial development, the new and enlarged commercial activities and the assimilation of new ideas in the Pacific Northwest. Realizing that the expansion of this comparatively new territory, with its large and varied undeveloped resources, will be largely patterned after the progressive steps of the past, the pages of the Pacific Northwest's history reveal many interesting things.
