

RED CROSS CHIEF DISCUSSES PLAN ON LOCAL VISIT

Miss Elizabeth Fox, director of the American Red Cross and public health nursing service from Washington, D. C., is at the Multnomah hotel today on her return to the East after attending the national convention of public health nurses in Seattle, of which she was re-elected national president.

"We have 1500 public health nurses distributed all over the country," said Miss Fox this morning. "Since the war the Red Cross has been going through a period of finding itself, but we are now coming out of it, and are shaped into a compact, economical organization."

MUCH WORK AHEAD
"The biggest thing the Red Cross is undertaking at present is the finishing up of the soldier job which should have been done long ago, but wasn't. We have still a little to do in connection with the government adjustments. Then comes the Junior Red Cross, which is growing, but which has not yet begun to reach its peak. Then we have our big health campaign which is largely carried on through our classes in home hygiene, care of the sick, first aid and nutrition. There is a tremendous need for all of them."

"In county districts there is no such thing as private duty nurses, and very few hospitals. People have absolutely no trained attention or guidance. Of course there is no such thing as replacing a doctor, but we are doing the best that can be done to meet the situation."

"This is tremendously appreciated by the local people, and well supported wherever there are any finances. Even when there are crop failures, they try to keep up the service. Disasters have always been one of our constant problems."

Miss Fox did not arrive with the bulk of the national nurses who thronged the city Sunday morning, but remained in Seattle to start the new year's work. She got into Portland Sunday night in time to attend the reception at the ex-Servicemen's club. This morning she spoke to the students of the public health nursing class and this afternoon she is conferring with Red Cross and public health officials. She leaves tonight for California.

The majority of nurses, who spent Sunday in Portland left early this morning.

THERMOMETERS REGISTER HIGH AS 105 AT SALEM

Salem, July 3.—With the government thermometer here registering an even 100 degrees Sunday afternoon Salem citizens sweltered in the hottest day of the summer and hottest day experienced here for many summers past. Thermometers about town registered as high as 105 degrees during the day, their location with respect to the sun. Bathing resorts and swimming "holes" did a thriving business and everybody who could get away sought the coolness of the country.

WALLA WALLA RECORDS NEW HIGH MARK FOR SUMMER

Walla, Walla, Wash., July 3.—The season's heat record again went soaring Sunday, when the mercury officially hit 101 degrees. This, following a week of heat which ranged from a 99-degree minimum to Sunday's maximum, is hastening the wheat harvest, with the result that farmers are fearing a labor shortage when operations start after July 4. According to Oscar Drumheller, prominent wheat rancher of this district, Walla Walla county is now between 200 and 300 men short of the necessary number to carry on the harvest operations.

HOT IN EUGENE

Eugene, Or., July 3.—With early temperatures so far today warmer than yesterday's it is probable the mercury will hit 100 degrees before night falls. Last night Eugeneans slept with the covers thrown back, following the hottest day in years. Ninety-seven degrees was Sunday's official high mark here. At Blue River, on the McKenzie, the tube showed a maximum of 108 degrees, unofficial.

VANCOUVER TRIES TO COOL
OFF IN TEMPERATURE OF 94
Vancouver, Wash., July 3.—A temperature of 94 degrees registered at the government weather station in charge of A. A. Quastberg made it difficult to keep cool here Sunday and Saturday. Short park and shady lawns were crowded by those who remained in town. Large numbers departed early for neighboring mountains and lake resorts. Much damage to all crops is resulting from the long continued dry spell and the size of prunes will be reduced unless rain falls soon. The thermometer stood at 73 this morning at 5 o'clock and a thick haze of smoke added to the heat discomfort.

LISS FARMERS CUT GRAIN TO SAVE LOSS FROM HEAT

Albany, Or., July 3.—Following yesterday's scorching heat, Linn county farmers are cutting their grain to save it from burning up. The result will, nevertheless, be a serious loss. It is said, and late spring grain is practically all discolored. The official thermometer, rising to 101, and private thermometers registering as high as 105 in various parts of the county, drove farmers to cut their grain. The sun is almost obscured by smoke, and there are no fires in the Santiam forest aside from a harmless glazing blaze of long standing.

30 AT BEND

Bend, July 3.—Record temperature for the year was recorded here again yesterday, 98 degrees being shown on the government thermometer. The previous mark, 97, was made on the previous Sunday. Yesterday's temperature was within one degree of the hottest weather ever recorded here.

38 AT RIDGEFIELD

Ridgefield, Wash., July 3.—Ridgefield and the surrounding country experienced the hottest day of the summer Sunday, when the mercury registered 38 degrees in the shade.

GRAIN HARBOR HOT

Hogus, Wash., July 3.—The mercury rose to 89 degrees here Sunday, bettering the high mark of Saturday by two degrees. It is not the highest mark of the year for the Harbor, however, a temperature of 93 degrees having been recorded on June 1.

32 AT CANNY

Oregon City, July 3.—Saturday registered as one of the hot days of the season in Clatsop county. At Canny the mercury reached 32, and at Oregon City 33. The hottest day of the season was on May 31, when the thermometer here registered 101 degrees.

MEXICAN BANDITS KILL U. S. WOMAN

Washington, July 3.—(U. N. S.)—Further evidence of the activity of Mexican bandits in the vicinity of Tampico reached the state department today in a dispatch from Consul Shaw announcing the killing of Mrs. Thomas Cheney, wife of an American citizen, at Chocoma, 40 miles northwest of Tampico, on June 30.

The bandit gang which attacked Mrs. Cheney was said to be under the command of the rebel leader Maximo Larrazabal. Shaw said the bandits demanded 3000 pesos when they attacked the oil camp and shot and killed Mrs. Cheney when she recognized the leaders of the outlawed Mrs. Cheney, according to the dispatch, was a Mexican by birth, but was married to an American citizen.

Secretary of State Hughes wired Shaw to immediately insist that the Mexican authorities apprehend and punish the murderers. The same instructions went to Charge Sumnerlin at Mexico City.

WIDOW'S SHARE AT ISSUE

Vancouver, Wash., July 3.—Philip Christ and Matilda Davis, executor of the will of Henry Christ, filed a motion Saturday citing Mrs. R. M. Christ, the widow, to show cause why she should not sign a waiver of sums of money devised her in the will and codicil and accept personal property left her as her full share of the estate.

IRISH INSURGENT FACTORY ATTACKED BY FREESTATERS

Dublin, July 3.—(U. N. S.)—(1:30 p. m.)—Irregulars arrested and imprisoned Lord Mayor O'Neill of Dublin this afternoon.

Dublin, July 3.—(10 a. m.)—A hot attack was begun at 9:40 o'clock by Irish Free State troops against a group of hotels in Sackville street, headquarters of Eamon de Valera's commander-in-chief of the Republican forces.

The insurgents now hold only a small group of buildings in Sackville street and the surrounding streets having been driven from the rest of their positions.

The Republican rebellion against the Free State appeared to be on the point of collapse so far as Dublin is concerned.

IRISH POLITICAL SITUATION CLEARED BY RECENT EVENTS

(By United News)
London, July 3.—From the clouds of the past few months, Ireland has emerged the brightest ray of light since the Anglo-Irish treaty was signed, a definite line-up of De Valera and other stragglers permitting an open fight for supremacy between him and the Free State leaders.

After months of half hearted self deception the Anglo-Irish leaders have come out into the open, the political situation is brighter than it has been since the few days of hectic joy preceding De Valera's repudiation of the Free State treaty.

Forecasting developments in Ireland during the last few months has been like guessing the winner of baseball games without knowing the players. Now that Great Britain has announced she will no longer tolerate an obscure compromise, the Free State government has courageously, and apparently successfully, challenged revolt and De Valera has finally cast his die against the Irish Free state. The result is that for the first time since the treaty was signed, everyone knows where everyone else stands.

The Free State is not yet victorious, but it has won a tremendous victory which will no longer tolerate an obscure compromise. The result is that for the first time since the treaty was signed, everyone knows where everyone else stands.

The fact that the Free State forces lost three men in forming the building meant nearly as much to them as it might have meant the other way if O'Connor and the self-styled "last ditchers" had died fighting.

The successful reading of the popular psychology by Arthur Griffiths and Michael Collins, the Free State chiefs, has resulted not only in the prestige gained by winning the first victory, but by thus far enacting the martyr roles for which the O'Connors and last ditchers were famous.

The successful reading of the popular psychology by Arthur Griffiths and Michael Collins, the Free State chiefs, has resulted not only in the prestige gained by winning the first victory, but by thus far enacting the martyr roles for which the O'Connors and last ditchers were famous.

The principal fear of the British, unshared by anyone else, is that there will be a sudden reversal of opinion among the Irish. The fact that the Free State has successfully made their opponents the aggressors, added to the fact that Dublin is blaming the insurgents for the threatened food shortage, is likely to prevent a switch in the sympathies of the Irish public.

De Valera's action in signing the treaty is the greatest because the era of compromise is definitely ended.

If the insurgents should win, which is most unlikely, both the British and Irish governments would fall.

Barring an insurgent victory, the next worst possibility probably would be a true, final fight, ending in the defeat of the insurgents, would firmly seal the Free State government in authority and would immensely increase the prestige of Lloyd George.

though it would raise the embarrassing problem of what to do with the prisoners, who could not be punished too severely for fear of making martyrs of them.

A Free State victory now will mean an end of the fighting in Ireland. Clashes would probably continue sporadically for months in the country districts. But it would mean that banditry Ireland would become merely annoying instead of dangerous.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS RALLING UP SLEEVES

ous objections to the policy of the O. W. R. & N. Co. in asking strikers to be armed.

The local strike committee insisted that none of the company's rights would be violated or jeopardized by any of the strikers. An announcement by Peter, chief of men, elaborated that there is little cause for alarm so far as the men who left the railroad company here are concerned.

Chief Peter said that there is no more need to hire special police to look after the men on strike than there was before the strike.

NO DESERTIONS FROM RANKS OF STRIKERS AT VANCOUVER
Vancouver, Wash., July 3.—The strike situation was unchanged this morning. There have been no desertions from the ranks of the strikers, according to Gene Peters, who is secretary-treasurer of the committee of 18, three months from each side, that will handle the strike for the men. Pickets will be placed today and everything will be conducted in an orderly, law-abiding way.

"We are financially fixed to hold out for some time," said Peters, "and we are not considering the question of strike benefits at this time."

F. C. Wagner, master mechanic of the S. P. & S., said he would hire any man who wanted to go to work in place of the strikers but there were no additions this morning to the small force remaining at work.

To Arrest Kansas Rail Strikers for Doing Picketing

Topeka, Kan., July 3.—(U. P.)—Arrest of striking railroad men said to have picked the Santa Fe shops here was expected today, Governor Henry J. Allen said, following reports that strikers stood in front of the shops affected and took the names of men who returned to work.

"There is no question about it—it is picketing, in violation of the Kansas law," Allen said. Allen also announced that if local officials were unable to prevent picketing in the state, then the state would do so.

Swimmer Drowned Just After Taking His Final Plunge

Ross K. Spencer, age 21, No. 627 Morrison street, was drowned in the Willamette river late Sunday night and below terminal No. 4, when he went in swimming near the towboat Sarah Dixon, on which he worked as a logger.

The young man and a companion went in swimming late in the evening, and after he had made his last dive he suddenly went under and did not rise to the surface. His companions on the boat tried in vain to rescue him.

The harbor police patrol has been searching for the body, which at a late hour today was not recovered.

Spencer is survived by his mother, Mrs. Nellie Kellogg Spencer, with whom he lived.

ELEVATORS BURN; LOSS $3,500,000

(By United News)

Baltimore Md., July 3.—One of the most costly fires in the history of Baltimore with a loss estimated at more than $3,500,000, the destruction of two immense Baltimore & Ohio railway elevators and several freight piers on Locust Point occurred Sunday night when lightning struck one of the great structures.

Every place of fire fighting apparatus in Baltimore was called to the scene. The forces succeeded in getting the blaze under control shortly before midnight. A sharp rain storm broke over Baltimore about 5:30 in the afternoon. The first alarm was turned in at 5:38 p. m. At 6 o'clock on the arrival of the chief of the department, six general alarms were sent in, and by 7:50 six more had been rung. The burning grain sent great clouds of smoke and blasting steam into the air. Sparks were carried to neighboring structures, threatening the entire group of buildings at Locust Point.

Patients were evacuated from the hospital at Fort McHenry, nearby. The hospital was saved after strenuous work.

Several firemen were reported overcome by smoke, but no loss of life thus far has occurred.

HOME FOLK AWAIT PRESIDENT HARDING

public square. He purchased the cabin, converted it into a tavern, bought 80 acres of land for a song and conceived the idea of founding a town. He called it Marion, in honor of General Marion of the "swamp fox" of the Revolution, and April 3, 1932, the plot of the town was acknowledged. From the time of its founding, Marion has grown to a city of more than 30,000 souls and has prospered beyond the usual run of American municipalities.

WILL MAKE CALLS

Other than being put down for a speech or two on the formal centennial celebration program and for a review of the American Legion in Marion, President Harding, during his stay in Marion, is to be largely to his own devices. Marion does not propose to treat him as a guest, and he would not have it so. He is a part of Marion, and, being at home, can do as he pleases.

It is certain he will make a round of calls at the homes of his old intimates. Unquestionably he will have dinner with the Jim Prendergasts, Colonel Jim being one of the many Marion residents who conceived the fine notion of "Harding for president."

And the president and Mrs. Harding will also break bread in the home of Colonel and Mrs. George B. Christian, father and mother of the president's secretary.

There is some doubt as to whether Colonel Christian will also invite Dr. Harding, the president's father, to the function. The reason for this is that for a great many years there has been a dispute as to whether it was Dr. Harding or Colonel Christian who really put down the "rebellion" of '61-65. Even President Harding, judicial and fair minded man that he is, has been unable to settle the controversy. Listening to the explanation of his father, he is convinced that it was he, single handed, who turned back the tide of the Confederacy. Then, when Colonel Christian gets under way, the president begins to doubt. In any event it is certain the honor lies between these two dining-housed residents of Marion. The president is convinced of that.

Many other old friends will entertain the president for a moment or two. Dick Crisinger is home from Washington. Charley King has the latch string hanging out; D. A. Frank is sure to have a call; "Gink" Schroeter will be constantly in the presidential midst and Charley King, brother of the "Duchess," will be an honored host.

Two Ranchers
Exchange Shots;
One Is Killed

Bend, July 3.—William Garrett, a rancher, working on the outskirts of Bend, was shot and killed Saturday night about 10:30 o'clock, by Edward Halvorsen, a neighbor.

The shooting occurred at the door of Halvorsen's house after Garrett had fired two shots at Halvorsen, according to the latter's story. Halvorsen is being held in the county jail pending the coroner's investigation. Halvorsen said that earlier in the evening he had gone to Garrett's home to hire Garrett to assist him in checking hay. Garrett had acted queerly, he said, and declared that someone was stealing his chickens and that he knew who it was and was going to kill him.

SHOTS FROM DOOR

After Halvorsen had gone home Garrett appeared plainly under the influence of liquor and accused Halvorsen of turning his horses loose and his chickens, the latter told the officers. Halvorsen closed the door of his house, all but a narrow crack, and stood there with a revolver he had borrowed from a Bend hotel man, watching Garrett as he paced the porch. Garrett pulled an automatic pistol and fired two shots which splintered the door within a few inches of Halvorsen, who then fired the one shell in his revolver, shooting Garrett squarely in the heart.

Halvorsen then immediately stepped to the telephone and told the Bend police to send the sheriff, explaining that he had shot a man. Roberts and Deputy Stokes were soon on the scene. They found Garrett's body 40 feet from the door, the automatic lying close to the right hand. The bullet holes were found in the door as Halvorsen had described and the bullet lying on the ground behind the house.

Garrett was 50 years of age and lived about a quarter of a mile from Halvorsen's home. Halvorsen stated Sunday that Garrett had threatened his life several times before and that trouble had been prevented only by the interference of Garrett's housekeeper, Coroner Niswonger is out of town so that no inquest was held Sunday.

Strikebreaker Is Shot by Guard; Refuses to Halt

Denver, Colo., July 3.—(U. P.)—John Patterson was shot and wounded by C. A. Welch, special officer at the Burlington railway shops, here today. Patterson told police he was going to work as a strikebreaker when Welch ordered him to halt as he walked through the shop grounds. Welch shot Patterson when he failed to stop, the latter said.

This is the first trouble of any kind to occur here in connection with the shopmen's strike.

CYCLIST IS HURT; COMPANION HELD

Oregon City, July 3.—Roy Micks, route 3, box 853, Portland, is in the Oregon City hospital with a fractured skull, as the result of an accident near the Gladstone hill curve at 10 o'clock Saturday night. Clyde Mook of Lents is under arrest on technical charges of intoxication, and a third boy in the party, whose name has not been learned, escaped from Deputy Sheriff Hughes.

The boys, on route here in a motorcycle from Lents, on a switchback curve at the top of the Gladstone hill, hit three machines in succession, two going north and one parked alongside the road. All were thrown from the machine. Mook and the unidentified youth were in the side car. Mook was uninjured, but the other boy was cut about the forehead.

The car parked beside the road was without lights. It was driven by Palmer Paxton of Astoria, and the driver, following a warning by Deputy Sheriff Long, had pulled off the pavement. Van Svarverud, Eugene, and A. V. Langville, Portland, were the drivers of the other cars.

Hughes put the three boys in the car to bring them to Oregon City and take Micks to the hospital. An ambulance followed the turn on top of the Washington street hill, the youth with the cut forehead jumped out and fled. Micks' condition is said to be serious.

Mook was taken to the sheriff's office.
