

TARIFF BILL HAS LONG ROAD AHEAD BEFORE PASSAGE

By David Lawrence (Copyright, 1932, by The Journal) Washington, July 6.—If the Democrats really wanted to delay the passage of the pending tariff bill, the adoption of a dozen closure rules could prevent it. There are more than 1500 amendments proposed by the Republican members of the senate finance committee, and all the Democrats would have to do would be to demand a rollcall on each amendment when the vote is taken, or call for a quorum, and the actual time consumed in that process, irrespective of incidental debates, would postpone the final vote for at least two or three months.

But Senator Underwood, Democratic leader, told this correspondent today that the Democrats have absolutely no intention of filibustering by that method or any other. He insisted that the adoption of the closure rule would hurt the Republicans more than it would help them, because by limiting the debate to one hour for each senator it would be impossible for the bill to get through consideration.

FEW KNOW FACTS Few men in the senate are equipped with sufficient information to debate a tariff bill. The rank and file depend on the experts to do the debating. While much of the attack is futile, as the Republicans have enough votes to pass any bill they please, nevertheless the record of the debate thus far shows that as a consequence of discussion the Republicans have corrected many of their own mistakes, and in some cases the Republican majority has failed to support the finance committee recommendation and beaten their own amendments. Twelve hundred amendments are still to be considered. They did not come from the Democrats, but from the Republican members of the finance committee. Should a closure rule be enforced, most of these amendments would have to be passed over without debate on their merits.

sumed time in debating them. The bill is not yet in shape for passage. Even its champions will concede that it will be improved by further study, and that the debate may be helpful. In fact, two of the most important schedules on wool and cotton, Democratic leaders predict that the Republic will not venture to go before the country with a hastily constructed schedule on wool and cotton, and yet under a closure rule the debate would only be limited as to sections or provisions, but each senator would only have an hour. This means a total of 36 hours for debate, or a total of 12 working days at eight hours each.

SIXTY FAVOR CLOSURE The canvass today showed that about 60 senators are ready to vote for a closure rule. Sixty-four are needed to pass, as a two-thirds vote is required. Three Democrats will vote with the Republicans because they favor the pending bill. But there are at least three Republicans, and possibly more, who will not vote for closure. Developments over night may change this situation, of course, but the last poll showed an insufficient number to pass the rule. The hope of some of the Republicans is that the defeat of the closure rule may be attributed to the Democrats, and the responsibility for delaying the measure imposed upon them.

WY DEMOCRATS OPPOSE To the suggestion that it would be wiser for the Democrats to aid the closure rule and hurry the tariff bill's passage in its present form, the Democrats reply that they feel it their duty to propose certain amendments as a record of their effort to change the bill before its passage, and that if they supported a closure it would seem as if they favored the adoption of the bill as it stands.

REINSPECTION OF WIRING IS NEEDED, COUNCIL IS TOLD

There is more need of reinspection of electric wiring than there is of inspection of new work, because of the work that has been installed by itinerants and laymen.

The same conditions that caused the death of Fireman Baldwin—drop cords on electric lines—are to be found in many buildings installed by amateurs, and one third of the electric fires are caused by cord extensions.

These were declarations today of Electrical Inspector Going before a conference of a council special committee on reinspection of electrical wiring. Fire Marshal Grenfell added some statistics on electrical fires in Portland during the year.

The result of the conference was that it was tentatively agreed that the position of inspector of elevators and of reinspection of electric wiring be created, if this can be done legally under the tax conservation commission act. It is believed that it can be done because of the emergency. If it cannot, the item will be included in the next budget.

It was estimated that it would require $25 to carry the work for the remaining five months of the fiscal year, but that the petrol fees for the reinspection would more than offset this cost.

Fire Marshal Grenfell told the committee a reinspection would disclose that practically every other building within the inside fire limits has defective installations. He showed that in 1921 49 fires were due to defective wiring, and urged that the reinspection work be made continuous if it is to become effective. As there are more than 300 elevators to be inspected, it was decided that the combining of this work with electrical reinspection would provide sufficient work to keep one inspector busy all the time.

CAUFIELD CHOSEN HEAD OF PIONEERS

Oregon City, July 6.—David Caufield, Oregon City, is the new president of the Clackamas County Pioneers' association, following his election to succeed County Judge Harvey E. Cross at the annual reunion Wednesday at the Gladstone Chautauqua.

Caufield had been vice president and was advanced when Judge Cross announced he would be unable to longer serve as chief executive due to private and official duties. Mrs. George A. Harding of Oregon City was chosen vice president. E. C. Hackett, secretary, and E. G. Caufield, secretary, were reelected.

The meeting of the association was coincident with the Pioneer day celebration at Chautauqua. Judge Peter H. D'Arcy of Salem was speaker of the day and Mrs. Edith Tuzler Weathered presided. Colonel Robert A. Miller of Portland also spoke. At the dinner in the evening, the association talks were made by a dozen pioneer women and at a big beef barbecue dinner, prepared by Ernest Palmer of Roseburg, who came especially to serve the pioneers, other speakers were heard, including E. C. Hackett, John Ravenna of Sandy, J. L. Carter of Oregon City and Dr. Owens Adair of Astoria.

The musical program for the day was staged by the Waltham Duo, Anna Harrel and Boyce Baker, who have named their act after the French painter. In the evening the huge auditorium was filled to see "Cappy Ricks," played by the Percival Vivian Troupe of New York. At the 5 o'clock symposium a number of Portland newsmen spoke.

Today will see Electra Platt and Vernon Stone on both the afternoon and evening stages, with J. C. Herberm lecturing in the afternoon and Dr. Earl Lynn Williams, "fighting parson" of Chicago vice district fame, appearing in the evening. Tomorrow the camera association will meet for picnic supper at 5 o'clock.

The program for Friday follows: 8:00 to 9:00—Y. M. C. A. education hour; 9:00 to 10:00—Bible hour, Rev. E. Earl Parker, D. D.; 11:00—Forum hour, Portland G. A. R.

AFTERNOON 1:30—Friedrich Gilver's lecture, program dedicated to G. A. R.; Judge George M. Stone, of Clatsop, on "The Court"; 5:30—Home demonstrations by extension department of O. A. Nollala vs. Canby; 5:00—Symposium, Oregon Naturalists.

EVENING 7:30—Grand concert, Gilvan Opera Co., a brilliant vocal entertainment featuring light opera in costume.

Survey Gang at Work Along Route of Tillamook Road

Preparatory to ultimate construction of a rail line to Tillamook by the Hill railroad interests, a crew started from the coast end of the line Wednesday to make a survey through to the present terminus of the Gales Creek & Wilson River railroad at Agard.

While local officials of the Hill interests refused to confirm or deny the survey work, it is known that the route of the future extension is being given careful attention. The plan is to lay out the route of a permanent line so that later engineers will know definitely where the road will pass and will be able to plan their construction accordingly.
