

DISORDERS LEAD TO ARREST OF 4 RAIL STRIKERS

Increasing disorders were encountered by police Thursday night and the morning in the railroad shop strike, resulting in the arrest of four strikers. In each instance, however, the disturbances were isolated cases and police are not inclined to consider the outlook serious.

Police anticipate any serious trouble," declared Acting Chief of Police John T. Moore this morning in reviewing the situation. "We have the situation well in hand and at present see no need of any extra men to police the shop districts."

Frank Logan, hollockmaker's helper, was arrested this morning for assault and battery by Patrolman Horton at a Brooklyn carhop on the complaint of H. W. Bladarn, a strikebreaker, who claimed that Logan forcibly interfered with him as he was on his way to work.

PRISONERS RELEASED

Patrolman Horton reported he saw a commotion near the gates of the yard and when he arrived he found two young scuffling. Neither was seriously hurt, although Bladarn charged Logan struck him several blows in the face. Logan was released on $100 bail.

Manuel Feretti, shopworker living at No. 748 East 21st street, was knocked down in front of his home by two men late Thursday night. Patrolman Stevenson, who arrived a moment later, arrested Clifford E. Holmes and Edward Stewart on charges of disorderly conduct, after they were identified as the assailants by Feretti's son. They were released on $100 bail each.

SAKE TEBRETS

Police were called to investigate a case of vandalism late Thursday night at No. 831 Grand avenue, where a Mrs. Berth reported that windows in the back of her home were broken with rocks. Her husband and son are working in railroad shops and it is believed that the window smashing episode was the work of strikers.

Four strikers riding a motorcycle and sidcar followed C. C. Knowles, railroad strikebreaker, No. 7 Webster street, to his home late Thursday night where they stopped him and threatened to "kick" him and break the windows in his home unless he quit work. They did not attack him, however, Knowles reported.

Harry C. Buchanan, railroad mechanic, was arrested at the Brooklyn yards late Thursday night by Special Officer Murphy on a charge of disorderly conduct, after he is alleged to have forcibly interfered with workers going to the shops. He was released from jail on $100 bail.

Young Vanderbilt Not Thrilled by Prospects of Trip

San Francisco, July 21.—(U. P.)—William E. Vanderbilt Jr., aged 15, strolled to his breakfast in San Francisco's most exclusive hotel today entirely unthrilled by the prospects of leaving within an hour on his first trip to the Orient.

At least that's what those who have had the pleasure of meeting young Mr. Vanderbilt said. His tutor was very careful as to who met him and for 38 hours has successfully deflected him against the newspaper fraternity of San Francisco.

Young Vanderbilt is the guest here of Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, his aunt. She owns the hotel. Apparently the only person who has talked to him is the hotel manager.

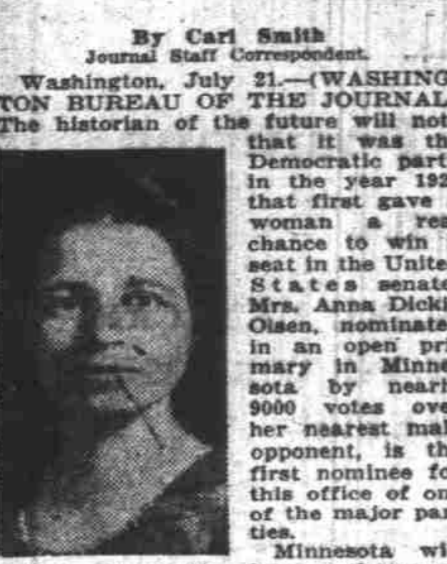

"He is not at all thrilled by his prospects of visiting Japan," the manager explained. "He understands the trip is purely educational and he has the intellectual newspapermen."

Young Mr. Vanderbilt (they all call him Mr. Vanderbilt) looked the part as he sat beside his tutor at a secluded table eating a "continental breakfast."

Three Women in Senate Race Each Backed By Democrats

Mrs. Anna Dickie Olsen, one of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

It proposed two names to be voted on by the voters. The state leaders have pledged their support, and her nomination in September is regarded as a formality.

LA FOLLETTE TO WIN

All signs point to the renomination of Senator La Follette by the Republicans, despite the bitter opposition of the La Follette wing of the party, which has an unknown college professor, Dr. W. A. Ganfield, as its candidate. The Socialists have refrained from making any nomination, and will go to La Follette.

Socialists do not generally flock into the primaries of other parties, but the general assumption is that a considerable number will aid in nominating La Follette, and that the most of them will vote for him in November. With La Follette nominated, the disbanding Republicans will have the choice of naming an independent or voting for Mrs. Hooper. Even with this help, however, it seems unlikely that Mrs. Hooper can win against La Follette, who is reckoned almost as a sure winner.

IZETTA JEWELL BROWN RUNS

The Democrats may nominate a third candidate for the senate in West Virginia, where Mrs. Izetta Jewell Brown is a candidate for nomination. She is widely known as a former stage favorite, the widow of Representative Brown. She has a pleasing personality and independent wealth. It is difficult at this time to estimate her chances for the nomination.

Two women Republicans, of radical-cutting into Kellogg's vote, and Mrs. Olsen backed by the Democratic vote, the affair takes a turn favorable to her candidacy, and Minnesota may return the first woman senator.

Nearby, in Wisconsin, the Democrats are also to have a woman candidate for the senate, Mrs. Ben G. Hooper, who is president of the Women Voters' league of that state. Under the Wisconsin system, a state convention is held, and one or more candidates are proposed to the voters for nomination at the primaries. The Wisconsin Democratic convention named Mrs. Hooper by acclamation for senator, although

Noted Authority on Forestry to Make Tour of Northwest

T. S. Woolsey Jr., consulting forester with offices in New Haven, Conn. who is a world wide authority on forestry, is at the forest service headquarters to arrange for an extensive field trip through Northwest forests to gain material for a book.

Woolsey's father is professor of international law in Yale university; his grandfather was president of the institution. Woolsey was formerly inspector in the southern district for the forest service and was later chief of forest management in Arizona and New Mexico. Since leaving the service, he has traveled extensively and has studied forestry conditions throughout other countries. Among his latest books are "Forests and Forestry in France" and "Forestry in French Provinces."

When the war came on, Woolsey served in special capacity in Paris as American representative of the installed forestry committees.

Woolsey was former lecturer on forestry at the Yale forestry school. His latest book "Forest Regulations" deals with different forest regulations in European countries with special application to their practicability here.

Despite his extensive travels this is Woolsey's first trip to the Pacific Northwest and he plans to spend six weeks making a study of the forests of Oregon, Washington, California and Montana, with special emphasis on Douglas fir, yellow pine and lodgepole pine.

His trips through the Northwest are being arranged by Fred Ames, assistant district forester.

Solid Firm Pieces May Take Places Of Hollow Columns

Solid Douglas fir timbers may take the place of hollow columns in building construction of the future, according to John D. Guthrie of the forest service, who has just returned from a detail in Washington, D. C., and a visit through the forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis., where tests are being conducted as to the strength of solid columns.

A machine has been installed which will take timbers of long and narrow sizes and test them to destruction. The tests are being carried on in response to a great demand on the part of building engineers for actual figures on the strength of solid columns.

OFFICER'S SHOT FATAL

Eugene, July 21.—Thomas Fair, shot by a law officer near Colburg several months ago, died at the Eugene hospital yesterday. Fair, alleged to have been implicated in an illicit liquor transaction, suffered a broken and infected leg.

SCOUTS AT CAMP IN NO DANGER, SAYS FORESTER

Forest Supervisor Thomas H. Sherrard, working on the Herman creek fire which has swept up the mountains between Herman creek on the west and Lindsey creek on the east adjacent to the Columbia river highway, issued a statement by telephone this morning that in his opinion the boy scouts encamped at Wahnum lake are not in the slightest danger. He said, however, that the fire itself is in anything but a satisfactory condition, having broken beyond bounds, crossing Herman creek in spots to the west and extending back for an undefined distance from the highway.

"We are holding the fire out of the Herman creek timber," Sherrard told Acting District Forester E. N. Kavanaugh. Sherrard denied ever having issued orders that the scout camp be abandoned. He said no one in authority in the forest service had made any such recommendation or suggestion. The fire is now a long way from the camp with little probability of its ever getting that far. Should it do so, however, the boys would be in no danger as other trails, leading through regions untouched by fire, would be open for their egress.

Kavanaugh said only about 125 fire fighters are at work in the Herman creek district, although others are being sent out on occasion to require to fight sporadic offshoots of the main fire.

Definite orders were sent out to all forest supervisors today that no campfires whatever be allowed in the national forest of Oregon until special permits have been obtained. These may be had without charge on application to forest rangers or supervisors. The order is to establish a method of checking on persons in the forests.

Direct word came Thursday afternoon from James E. Brockway, scout executive, who is now at the scout summer training camp at Wahnum lake, 12 1/2 miles from the Columbia river highway, that the boys stationed there are in no danger from the forest fire.

Brockway, with 69 scouts, reached the camp Thursday morning, and immediately after he had surveyed the situation and reassured himself as to conditions, he telephoned to local scout headquarters the information that all was well with the camp and campers and that the boys would be able to remain and finish the prescribed course without the necessity of alarm because of the forest flames.

There are about 180 boys at the camp. Twenty of them will be returned to Portland this week.

Drought to Send Up Sound Milk Price

Seattle, July 21.—(U. P.)—With the weatherman chalking up the 60th day of drought today, both milk and lumber distributors gave warning of higher prices in their products. Milk distributors declared that due to the shortage of grass, cows are being fed hay and are producing less milk. With milks closing daily for lack of logs, the West Coast Lumbermen's association predicts higher prices in shingles and other lines.

BOY SHOOTS SELF

Eugene, July 21.—Merlin Hastings, high school boy, accidentally shot himself in the shoulder Thursday night with a .22 calibre rifle.

Kellogg's TOASTED CORN FLAKES

Kellogg's CORN FLAKES

No other food has such an appeal on a hot day as Kellogg's Corn Flakes! They win fickle appetites, they satisfy hungry folks! And, my, but they are delicious in their crisp crunchiness and wonderful flavor!

As an extra-summer taste thrill, eat Kellogg's with bananas or the luscious summer fruit new in season. Such a diet is not only ideal from a health standpoint, but it is refreshing—cooling and enjoyable beyond words.

Eat Kellogg's Corn Flakes liberally because they digest easily. Let the children have all they want. All will be better for a lighter diet—and free from headaches and sluggish drowsiness.

Insist upon Kellogg's Corn Flakes in the RED and GREEN package that bears the signature of W. K. Kellogg, originator of Corn Flakes. None are genuine without it!
