Negro Chased Out of Town by Night Riders Is Last Witness Before Grand Jury; Story of Hanging Reviewed.

By Ralph Watson
Journal Staff Correspondent
Medford, Or., July 31.—The story that Arthur Burr, last witness of major importance to be called before the Jackson county grand jury in its investigation of the hanging outrages which took place here in March last, told the jury when he appeared before it this morning is supposed to run something like this:

He had served his sentence for bootlegging and the time for his liberation had expired during the middle of the afternoon of March 14. He was not released, however, until later and after Jackson had settled down over the jail. Then Bert Moses, the jailer, came to him and asked him if he would like to ride to Medford, Jacksonville and the jail being about five miles from this city.

TWO MEN IN CAR

Burr found an automobile standing by the side of the jail, with two men in the front seat. He was directed to get into the back seat and the journey toward Medford was commenced. The two white men in the front seat held no conversation with their colored passenger behind them, and conversed between themselves in low tones or in whispers.

A short distance out of Jacksonville a machine that had been following them passed the one in which Burr was riding and then stopped. The driver of the Burr machine also stopped. Then four men from the other car came back to where Burr sat and demanded of the two men in the Burr machine what they were doing with that nigger in the back seat.

PUT ON HANDCUFFS

Burr was then taken out of the machine, his hands cuffed behind him.

7-Year and 2-Year Terms Are Given To Counterfeiters

Violation of the counterfeiting laws is a "grave offense," and men found guilty of it need not expect leniency at the hands of the Oregon federal court, Judge C. E. Wolverton told Sam F. The men were convicted last week. Owens of counterfeiting and both with having counterfeit coins in their possession.

The sentences were allowed to run concurrently. Brown, who is 18 years of age, was also given a nominal fine of $5, in addition to his jail sentence, as the law prescribes both fine and imprisonment.

Joe Walsh Quits Congress Don't Know Him? Read This

By Carl Smith
Journal Staff Correspondent
Washington, July 31.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL) Joe Walsh has resigned. This refers to Joseph Walsh of Massachusetts, at various times during the last few years speaker of the house pro tem, and at all times active on the floor, one of the busiest little fellows who ever sat in that body. The little refers to his body, not to his brain.

Never heard of him? This average reader will say. For he has a few newspapers outside of Massachusetts, New York and Washington, even recorded the fact that he is leaving the house to accept appointment on the supreme court of Massachusetts. But all members of congress know Joe Walsh, and the unique place he has made for himself in Washington.

Walsh is one of the few men who enter congress who have the disposi-

Berlin, July 31.—According to an announcement by the faculty, Professor Einstein has discontinued his lectures at the University of Berlin. Although no reason is given, it is understood that lack of serious interest in the lectures is the cause of their abandonment.

At one of his recent lectures, the audience was composed mostly of foreigners, including three American students and several English speaking women who dropped in during an interval between a shopping tour and a visit to a theatre. They displayed far more interest in the personality of the famous professor than in the learned exposition of his theories. Professor Einstein did not like being a target for the opera glasses of curious casual visitors. Malignant persons say, too, that the attendance at the lectures was considerably larger on rainy days than when fine weather prevailed and the tourists had other opportunities for sight seeing.

Salem, Or., July 31.—The amended petition filed last week by counsel for Charles Hall in the gubernatorial recount case was allowed with certain qualifications in a decision rendered this morning by Judges Bingham and Kelly sitting en banc in the Marion county circuit court.

Under the court's ruling the Hall forces are allowed to extend the recount into Baker, Clatsop, Sherman and Wasco, the four additional counties enumerated in the petitions where irregularities also are charged. A total of 1895 votes are involved in Hall's amended complaint.

The court, however, denied the application advanced on behalf of Hall that the entire vote in the seven enumerated Marion county precincts be thrown out because of influence alleged to have been exercised in these precincts by the Catholic church and its agents. The Hall people contended that in the precincts of East Mount Angel, West Mount Angel, St. Paul, Sublimity, West Gervais, McKee and Scollard, Olcott had received a total of 843 votes and Hall 23 votes, an overwhelming majority they attribute to the influence of the church wrongfully exercised.
