

GERMAN CANKER TERMED MENACE; FEAR NEW WARS

By Edna Ferber
(Copyright, 1922, by the United News)
Paris, Aug. 2.—This article concerns the most interesting and problematical spot on the map—Germany.

And Germany's condition at this moment is about as static as a Kansas twister, and twice as dangerous. Any American tourist with more than half vision who has visited Germany this year will agree that it is the paradox of the world.

Of all the European countries, Germany is at once the cheapest and the most expensive; the gayest and the dreariest; the most comfortable and the most wretched. For good measure, in attempting to describe it, one throws in such mixed adjectives as fascinating, horrible, depressing, feverish, inarticulate, absorbing, infuriating, pitiable, alarming.

REASONING IS FALSE
It's all very well for those of you who are not interested in Germany and its life or death to say it's all very well; brought it on themselves; let 'em take their medicine; imagine what they'd have done to us if they had won; we're all right over here in the United States, they can't touch us; nothing the matter with our country.

That line of reasoning is as childish and short-sighted as though one were to say, "I've got a bad cold, and in my left leg and gangrene has set in, but the rest of my body is perfectly healthy. Yes, sir. Rest of me is sound as a dollar."

The fate of Germany in the next few weeks or months is going to affect the world, including the United States. America some thousands of miles away. When gangrene sets in—and it probably has by now—the rest of the world is going to begin to turn dark, mottled and to pick at the coverlets.

SIGNS SIGNIFICANT
I wanted to write this article until I got out of Germany because I wanted to have what is known as perspective. Equipped with this perspective, my opinion of Germany remains unchanged in my mind, an opinion stamped there during the first week of the passion play crowds in Munich in the early spring, and deepened by such events as the Rathenau murder in Berlin and the demonstrations that followed it.

That one demonstration on the Kur-furstendam, July 4, appeared harmless enough on the surface. It was planned by the labor party as a protest against the murder of Rathenau. Thousands and thousands of men and women, marching, marching in orderly rows, carrying banners and singing. Thousands and thousands of them. No violence, no shooting, no disorder. But a Russian just behind me in the crowd that stood watching the procession pass by, said:

WHAT DOES IT MEAN!
"I tell you it is curious. This is exactly the way it started with us in Russia. Orderly crowds, marching, marching with banners. Men and women. You wait; you will see."

During the days of my stay in Berlin I had heard that said many times, and it never failed to startle me. "You wait, you will see." I heard it said by waiters and shop keepers and bankers and impoverished rich (the nouveau pauvre it calls itself). Always I asked: "What do you mean?" Always they answered thus:

"There will be another war. We will fight again as soon as we are strong. The treaty of Versailles must be wiped out. We will form an alliance with Russia and with Austria. Then we shall go bolshevik. There will be another war. Wait, you will see."

There are many who laugh at this, but me, I think they mean it. I hope I'm wrong. Austria, thus far, has taken its medicine lying down.

But Germany, sullen, resentful, hideously depressed, is going to resist, or it's a scoundrel at heart.

MONEY MAIN ISSUE
Talk to any German for 15 minutes and he'll be on the subject of the 14 points, Wilson, France, the treaty of Versailles, the Valuta, and something he calls Loitchoroh and by which you dazedly realize later he means Lloyd George.

The Valuta, of course, kings it all over any other topic of conversation. Valuta means money value. One hears the word on the streets, in restaurants, in hotels, at the theatre, on the vaudeville stage, in the newspapers, on the paper type. It stares at one from the kiosk bills. It forms the basis of German and of tourist conversation. It has superseded the weather, the scandal, everything. It is, inevitably, the first question on rising. "What's the mark worth today?" At this moment, for all I know, it may be worth nothing.

Engine Bumps Auto; Driver Not Injured

Astoria, Aug. 2.—A coupe driven by Miss Winnifred Brown was struck by a slowly moving switch engine which was pushing a box car along the tracks of the S. P. and S. Monday. The slow rate of speed at which the engine was moving prevented a serious accident and a badly damaged car. The occupant of the car was unhurt and the car was only slightly damaged. The cause of the accident was reported to be a faulty pendulum warning at the street crossing. Miss Brown had her car shipped by boat from California and had just received it when the accident occurred.

Marines Leave for Wyoming to Eject Oil Drilling Crew

The action of the government in sending the marines into Wyoming was vigorously protested by Governor Carey in a message to President Harding. Carey said the move was not warranted.

UNITED EFFORT IN EUROPE REQUIRED

Copyright, 1922, by Universal Service, Inc.
Washington, Aug. 2.—An united effort as great, perhaps greater, than that which won the war, will be required to reconstruct Europe.

This declaration was made by Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, in an exclusive interview with Universal Service today.

Between conferences with President Harding and Secretary Hughes, Ambassador Herrick was generalizing from specific knowledge on the condition of Europe and its relation to the world at large.

For reasons which his delicate position make obvious, he could not express an opinion for publication as to what form this united effort should take.

But he said: "The elements and materials of reconstruction are there and I feel confident that when the critical moment comes a common inspiration such as that which won the war will form and generate the united effort needed to win the peace."

"The work of rebuilding is made difficult because the war resulted in making some of the peoples of Europe suspicious and distrustful of one another."

Ambassador Herrick asked to be excused from direct comment on the proposed funding of the French debt by the United States which he was to discuss today with Secretary Mellon and Jean V. Farmetier, France's financial envoy. Mr. Herrick is himself a banker, having been president of the Society for Savings at Cleveland.

30,000 GREEKS ASSEMBLE TO HIT CONSTANTINOPLE

(Special Cable to The Journal and the Chicago Daily News)
(Copyright, 1922)

Constantinople, Aug. 2.—General Harrington, commander-in-chief of the allies' forces occupying the neutrally zone, has issued a proclamation announcing that the recent movements of the Greeks have given the cabinet heads and the military staff cause to reflect that the Greek concentration in Thrace began three weeks ago and that the Greek army before Constantinople numbers more than 30,000. The allied forces are inferior numerically. The proclamation also says that reinforcements are arriving daily. (A dispatch from Mr. Brown dated August 1 announced that the Greeks have arrived at the Turkish frontier at Tchatchaj in close proximity to the line occupied by the French and that trouble was feared owing to feeling between the two forces because of the suspected intention of the Greeks to march on Constantinople against the wishes of the allies.)

GREEK POLICY SEEN
Greek statesmen have long considered the occupation of Constantinople as the only proper outcome of the war. Last spring they tried to convince Lloyd George that the only means of forcing the Kemalists to come to terms was to permit the Greeks to occupy the residence of the caliph and hold it as security until the nationalists accepted the peace terms proposed by the allies.

During the discussions at the last council of ministers under the presidency of King Constantine the question was again discussed and in the face of the impossibility of overthrowing the Kemalists the ministers decided to occupy Constantinople.

According to information from Athens this decision was communicated to governments of the allies and while the Greek government awaits favorable replies from the allies the Greek army has received instructions to march on Constantinople.

PEOPLE PANIC STRICKEN
Mustapha Kemal Pasha, accompanied by a large staff, has arrived at Ismid to inspect a newly arrived division. In the meantime the Nationalist representative in Constantinople has notified the allied high commissioners that should the Greeks attempt to cross the neutral zone and occupy Constantinople Kemal troops, held in readiness 50 miles from the city, would also cross the zone and come to the rescue of the town.

The people in the capital are panic-stricken. The Turkish and allied police have taken strict measures to prevent eventual outbreaks in the native quarters. British cavalry and French military police patrol the streets ready to suppress any attempt to disturb order.

Publisher Handed Brazilian Mission

(By Universal Service)
Washington, Aug. 2.—Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher, was today named by President Harding to be a member of the honorary Brazilian commission to attend the Brazilian centennial in Rio Janeiro in September. The other members of the commission already have been appointed. They are: Secretary Hughes, Major General Bullard, Admiral Hillyar Jones and Representative Stephen G. Porter, chairman of the house foreign affairs committee.

Urges Movement by Filipinos Similar to That of the Ghandi

Manila, Aug. 2.—(U. P. S.)—Passage of a non-cooperation resolution by the legislature and formation of a non-cooperation party similar to the Ghandi movement in India as a means of forcing the United States to recognize the independence of the Philippines, was advocated today by Vicente Letena, member of the Filipino independence mission, the vanguard of which, returning homeward, arrived on the Empress of Asia.

He declared Americans have an erroneous view of the Filipinos, thinking them unprepared for independence. He said the masses in the United States are "square dealing" and would acquiesce quickly if his program was carried out.
