

SENATE'S STAND FOR FREE HIDES CAN'T BE CHANGED

Washington, Aug. 15.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—When the senate voted to place hides on the free list, it took final action which cannot be changed in conference, because the tariff bill as it passed the house also had hides free of duty. Most of the rates upon which contest have taken place in the senate cannot be regarded as final, because in the game of give and take they may be changed in conference. It is therefore important to note that the hide question is settled by the vote in the senate, and that also settled boots and shoes, which will likewise remain on the free list because the senate voted the same way. Had the duty on hides proposed by the senate financial committee been approved, there would have been a tariff shift on boots and shoes to compensate the manufacturer for the extra cost of hides.

MEMBERS UNWILLING

It was for that reason that free hides won. A large majority of the senate is unwilling to say that the price of shoes, which undeniably would affect every man, woman and child, should be increased in order to provide a slightly larger return on hides, especially when it was generally agreed that this benefit would largely go to the big Chicago packers. This was not admitted by Senator Stanford, but a few other western senators, but Senator Lodge frankly stated that he understood this would be the effect. When the hide question was before the house, Representative Hawley took the leadership of the free hide forces and won a decisive victory. He argued that the few cents which might be gained to the hide producer by a tariff would be offset by the increased price of shoes to the farmer and his family, while the greater number of people who have no hides to sell would pay tribute without any return whatever, all for the benefit of the packers.

HAWLEY AGAINST TARIFF

Hawley, who had made a study of the subject and backed his opinion with an elaborate speech, was the only member of the Oregon delegation who failed to support the tariff on hides, either in house or senate. He was even accused of deserting sound Republican ranks by Senator Stanford. In the senate, however, the party leader was for free hides, and 23 Republican senators voted that way against 19 who favored the tariff. The Senate Republican majority arranged the majority of his Republican colleagues for their position, declaring they were not content with protection. He was not surprised at some of them, he told the senate, "because they have shown that they are not consistent protectionists; that they are apparently in favor of protection for products that directly concern the locality in which they are interested."

Speaking on that topic, Senator Lodge declared that he is for protection without any regard to locality. "But the question here," he added, "is as extensive as the boundaries of the nation." The maker of boots and shoes, he said, asks no tariff if he can have his basic material free of duty; but if hides are to be taxed, so must boots and shoes.

FEAR PACKERS

"Those who tan the leather and perform that essential part in the production of leather work of all kinds also ask to have this market in order that they may not be driven out of business and completely absorbed by the packers," said Lodge, "who necessarily have the greatest supplies of hides and who inevitably will benefit by the proposed duty more than will anybody else."

All the flockmasters of the senate voted for the duty on hides. Senators of the Pacific Northwest who supported the duty were Gooding of Idaho and Stanfield and McNary of Oregon. Jones and Poindexter of Washington were paired in favor, and Borah of Idaho voted against it. Other Republicans, 23 all told, who voted against it, were:

Ball, Brandegee, Calder, Colt, Cummings, Dillingham, Edge, Fellinghusen, Hale, Hayes, Lenroot, Lodge, Moses, New, Newberry, Pepper, Rawson, Spencer, Sutherland, Townsend, Wadsworth and Willis.

Mathilde and Oser Soon to Wed; Seek 'Love in Castle'

Lucerne, Switzerland, Aug. 15.—(I. N. S.)—Residents of Reiden, the village where Major Max Oser lives, are convinced that the 47-year-old Swiss riding master will be married within a short time to Miss Mathilde McCormick, 17-year-old granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, but they expressed emphatic belief today that the couple would not go to the United States on their honeymoon.

It is understood that Major Oser not only fears adverse criticism, but is afraid of actual violence because he succeeded in winning away a part of the Rockefeller-McCormick millions and the beautiful young girl into the bargain. Oser is very sensitive on that score. It is said that Chateau Prangins, owned by the McCormick family, was tentatively offered to Major Oser and Miss Mathilde, but the groom-to-be was unwilling to accept. Major Oser and Miss McCormick were still in parts unknown today. They were understood to be castle hunting. Both desire an isolated spot where they will not be annoyed by reporters and inquisitive tourists. It is to be love in a castle—not a cottage.

Director General Davis of the service declared Monday. Davis came to this county to inspect the site for the proposed Umatilla rapids irrigation project in the western end of the county, which would include construction by the government of a huge dam and power plant.

In regard to the McKay creek project which the reclamation service already has authorized, Davis declared appropriations have been made sufficient to care for the acquiring of the acreage to be flooded but that no means are in sight to obtain the money for actual construction. The inspection of the Umatilla rapids site is the first official inspection that has ever been made and Umatilla county advocates of the plan are well pleased with the attitude Davis has taken in regard to the proposal.

NEW COTTON RATE AID TO PORTLAND

Portland and other Pacific coast ports have won a long and determined fight to gain a part of the cotton movement from Southern states according to advice received Monday afternoon by the Portland Traffic & Transportation association from the Interstate Commerce commission.

The report from the I. C. C. was to the effect that the Pacific coast export rate schedule, which had been suspended upon objection of Galveston and other Gulf ports, had been approved by the I. C. C.

Under this ruling Portland and other ports of the Pacific will have the same rail and water rate to the Orient as the combination rail and water rates from the cotton shipping point through the Gulf ports.

The order calls for publication of tariffs providing for this equalization of rates and, since there is no emergency order attached, the rates will become effective at the end of 30 days or about September 15.
