The genman of the port commission, at a meeting of the Rotary club Friday. Swan explained the steps taken to prevent removal of property which reverts to the port and said that R. V. Jones, vice president of the Standifer corporation, is working to get an industry to take over and operate the plant.

"We are not clear as to our rights in the matter of property," said Swan "nor is Jones, and we have arranged for an immediate conference between our attorney and the attorney of the Standifer corporation for the purpose of drawing up an agreement defining what can and what cannot be removed. The port commission is paying $732.96 chase the site, but the Standifer cor- at the on its personal property." Every effort is being made to get some big manufacturing concern to take over the property and make use of the Liberty hotel and cottages built during the war, which represent an investment of $420,000. The site of the Standifer steel shipyard was purchased by a bond issue of $185,000, voted by people, and was leased to the corporation for 30 years at a nominal rental. A clause in the lease empowers the port commission to bring suit for recovery of the property when the Standifer corporation ceases to maintain an adequate manufacturing plant on the property, if conditions are favorable. Dangerous Grade on Highway Eliminated

La Grande, Aug. 19.—The Wallowa, hill grade, for many years one of the most dangerous sections of road in Eastern Oregon, has been eliminated from the road to Joseph by the opening of the new grade from Minam. Starting at Minam the road winds gradually up along the river until it enters a canyon. Although there are places where there is an almost perpendicular descent over the edge of the road, at no place does the grade ex-ceed the specifications of the state highway department, and two automo-biles can pass at all points.
