In fact, exporters here delayed their purchases so long that their ships have been forced to await cargo at heavy expense. This is the reason why prices on the coast have been at the premium over the Atlantic and Guif ports. Flour market continues extremely quiet.

Flour market continues extremely quiet. Export business is nil so far as new orders are concerned. Activity in shipping is confined to old business, although there is considerable of this being moved. Homestic flour trade is slow, with indications of further cutting in patent unless wheat market does better.
