Marriage at Church

By Hazel Handy
BEFORE an altar banked with lilles and pale pink dahlias, Dr. A. A. Morrison read the bridal yows of Miss Helen Gregg and Mr. John Ross Dickson Jr., in Trinity chapel this morning. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends, and as a prelude to the impressive but simple service Mr. J. A. McHolland played several organ selections. The bride, who entered on the arm of her father, was stunning in a smart tailleur of dark blue panvelaine with s trimming of gray squirrel. With this she wore a hat of blue velvet and metal cloth, embroidered in silver leaves, and a corsage of orchids and lily of the valley. Her only attendant was her cousin, Mrs. Everett James Smith of Walla Walla, who was also gowned in a French tailleur in brown tone, with touches of black, a large black hat and corsage of roses in deep yellow tones completing her costume. Mr. Henry Westbrook Dickson attended his brother as best man.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Cloud Gregg immediately followed. Receiving with the bridal party were Mr. and Mrs. John Ross Dickson Sr. and the bride's parents. At the colla-tion table presided Mrs. John Forrest Dickson, Mrs. Frederick E. Judd. Mrs. Charles Bliss Preston and Mrs. L. Ward White. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Eltop Watkins, Mrs. Owen Maris and Miss Agnes McBride. Out of town guests were Mrs. Joseph Gottstein of Seattle, Miss Edna Stone of Walla Walla, Miss Jane Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Buroughs and Dr. and Mrs. H. J. McKenzie, all of Pendleton. -Old Granny Fox.

OMPLETELY around the fence of Farmer Brown's henyard the young Fox crept, looking for a hole throught which he might creep, but there was no hole. All the time he took the greatest care to keep below the top of the boards which ran around the bottom of the fence. Whenever he stopped to peep in at those hens he was careful to raise his head only high enough to look over the boards By this time he had forgotten everything but the desire to catch one of those hens, and, like a true Fox, he was doing his best not to frighten them. But when he had crept completely around that henyard without finding a hole by which he could get n he grew careless. Perhaps he thought that if he couldn't get in they couldn't get out and therefore it wasn't necessary to keep out of sight. Perhaps he thought that if he couldn't feast his stomach he could at least feast his eyes with the sight of those hens. Anyway, he presently sat up and stared hungrily brough the wire netting of the fence. Now, if the young Fox hadn't known until now what hens were, the hens knew perfectly well what a Fox was, One of them spied him sitting there and with a frightened squawk rushed pelimell into the henhouse. such a racket as broke out in that henyard! Such a squawking! Such a cackling! And such a racing as there was for the safety of that hen-

All this time Sammy Jay had been sitting silently in a tree in the Old Orchard, from which he could see all that went on. When those hens began to squawk Sammy Jay fairly hugged himself. Things were beginning to happen now. He knew it.
Some one at Farmer Brown's would be sure to hear those hens. Sammy's eyes fairly snapped with anticipation.
Now, Bowser the Hound had been taking a map on the back doorstep of Farmer Brown's house. Of course he awoke at the sound of those hens. He knew right away that something was wrong over at that henyard. Probably It wasn't anything much, for those silly hens were forever making a fuse over nothing. But it was his duty to find out if anything was wrong.

The notes of the second sec

The Rude Awakening of the Young Fox yawned, stretched, yawned again, then slowly walked toward that henyard. He didn't expect to find any one there. He thought to himself that probably one of those hens had seen a Hawk and that that was what all the fusa was about, and so he didn't hurry. Now all the time the young Fox had been so intent on those hens that he had forgotten everything else. He had forgotten that there was such a thing as danger anywhere in all the World. Not even when the hens began to make such a racket did he think of danger to himself. He merely secame more excited as those hens ran for the henhouse. He actually jumped against that fence in his excitement, You see, it was very tantalizing to see those hens running away from under his very nose.

It wasn't until the last hen had disappeared in the benhouse that the young Fox remembered that he was his mother had warned him never to go. He turned for a hasty look about him and right then that young Fox had a rude awakening. Yes, young Fox had a rune rude awakening indeed, it was a very rude awakening from his dreams of a good dinner. There coming straight loward him was Bowser the Hound, that dreadful dog he had once seen chasing his father! (Copyright, 1922, by T. W. Burgess)

Geraldine Farrar Conquers Audience With Rare Artistry

Geraldine Farrar, who sings at The Auditorium tomorrow night, direction Steers & Coman, packed the Spreckels theatre, San Diego, last Monday to the roof. The critic of the San Diego "The great Farrar conquered her San Diego audience as she has everything in her triumphant progress as an operatic and dramatic star, Throughout the concert she was act-ress as much as singer, and her striking and dominant personality colored her program. The climax came however, in her final encore, when she hecame not only actress and singer, but of the grand opera stage; Farrar, the incomparable Carmen, inimitable in the portrayal of the sinuous cat-like stor-portrayal of the sinuous cat-like stor-portrayal Spanish girl, as Farrar-herself, the old familiar idel mily temperamental Spanish girl, as she sang the Habanera."

Dyed a Sweater and Skirt with Diamond Dyes

Every "Diamond Dwes" package tells how to dye or tint any worm, faded garment or drapery a new rich color that will not streak, spet, fade or run. Perfect home dyeing is guaranteed with Diamond Dyes even if you have never dyed before. Just tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton or mixed goods. For fifty-one years millions of women have been using "Diamond Dyes" to add years of wear to their old, shabby waists, skirts, dresses, coats, sweaters, stockings, draperies, hangings everything!

Matzenauer Is FASCHOUS Heard by Big Audience

By J. L. Wallin. ARGARET MATZENAUER, primi

donna contraite of the Metropoli tan opera, and celebrated concert singer, opened Portland's concert season of 1922-23 auspiciously Tuesday night at The Auditorium by presenting a program that will be remembered as one of the most satisfying it ever has been the good fortune of music patrons here to enjoy.

Mme, Matzenauer is tall, graceful and unaffected, physical attributes that go hand in hand with her opulents side beneath the brim. voice to establish her as one, of the first stars in the realm of vocal art of today. She was splendidly supported also gave wariety to program by play-Vause, by the way, is an Oregon boy born at The Dalles, who was educated musically before striking out for the east, by Edgar L. Coursen, dean of Portland's many very excellent plansists. At the concert last night, Mr Vause's parents, and a large delegation of friends from The Dalles were in the audience that nearly packed the huge building. And Mr. Coursen, who himself, has played accompaniments for probably more famous singers than any other pianist in the country, was also among those who so enthusiastically applauded Mr. Vause.

Vause's solo numbers were happily chosen, Prelude by Schytte, Lento by Cyril Scott and MacDowell's Polonaise. His tone is soothing and style simple and natural and he interprets solemnly. with a clearness that lends restfulness to the performance.

The prima donna opened her program with a group of arias from three operas, the weird card song from "Carmen." the gay gavotte from "Mignon" and the dramatic and sparkling "Listi Signor" from "hes Huguenots." In this last named, the exquisite coloratura singing held the audience spellbound. Then came a storm of applause when she responded with the ever beautiful "By the Waters of Minnetonka," by Lieurance, for the first extra. Charmingly as she sang it. broad, smooth tones, its beauty was much enhanced by the delicate, refined playing of the accompaniment by Mr. Vause. Mme. Matzenauer sang four groups.
