Lim Kee was jointly indicted with Harry Chin on a charge of murdering John Stevens, a white man, at Second Burnside streets, November 10 1921, during the course of a tong war. The defendants are alleged to have been Suey Sings after Hop Sings. Stevens got in the way of a bullet. Harry Chin pleaded guilty to murder second degree and is serving life in the penitentiary.

MOTHERS' CONGRESS MAY HAVE TO GIVE UP ROOMS The Oregon Congress of Mothers will be asked to appear before the county commissioners in a few days and show cause why they should not give up rooms 550, 551 and 552 in the courthouse, which it now occupies free of charge, to make room for furors and court reporters. The circuit judges the commissioners to provide more room for jurors and reporters and Roadmaster Eatchel, who is superintendent of the building, reported that the congress of mothers appeared to have less right in the bailding than any of the other organizations. "The time approaches," said Commissioner Holman," when other of the semi-public organizations will have to give up their rooms to make way for expanding county and court business.'

was wanted on a charge of embezzing a few dollars.

ATTORNEY IS SENTENCED Charles S. Yates, formerly an attorney of Portland, pleaded guilty before Circuit Judge Gatens this morning to forgery of a check for $750 on the First National bank of The Dalles, July 6, 1921. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary and paroled.

Give Old Oregon Decent Burial at Sea, Officer Urges

Instead of leaving the battleship Oregon to rust to pieces on the mud flats of Bremerton, the ship should be brought to Portland or given a decent burial at sea, said Lieutenant R. E. Kerr, head of the navy recruiting office, in an address before the members' forum of the Chamber of Commerce at Lieutenant Kerr delivered his address as a tribute to Aumiral Charles E. Clark, commander of the Oregon in its eventful cruise from the Pacific to the Atlantic in the Spanish-American He said that the tribute should he extended also to the personnel and the builders of the ship.

The trip of the Oregon was the first step toward beginning the Panama canal, and since it was denied the honor of being the first ship through the canal it should at least be given recognition today and be disposed of in a manner fitting its record.

dently is not sure warfare is a thing stabulary as an instrument of its foes, but, here as elsewhere, whether It be a city police force, a state constabulary or a militia, the whole question turns upon the proper use of this arm of the law. The state militis has been disorganized chiefly because young men dislike strike duty. HAD LITTLE TROUBLE

The state constabulary performe excellent service during the coal and rail strikes last summer. Colorado and very little trouble and maintained ts coal production pretty well.

Mr. Sweet, the democratic nominee, calling loudly for the abolition of the constabulary. Although the Den-ver Post, one of the leading newspa-pers in the West, has frequently supported Democratic candidates, and was conspicuous factor in helping Woodplatform of the Democratic state ticket s so thoroughly disliked that the Post has just come out editorially today in support of the entire state ticket of the Republicans. Says the Post:

"The Republican platform indorses the sacredness of the constitution of Colorado, and declares for the enforcement of her laws. It opposes these pernicious foreign 'isms' imported into Colorado from Europe. It stands for he protection of ment of her laws. It the protection of property rights. It stands for continued peace and prosperity and the employment of both labor and capital, and in all other ways is a patriotic American platform, LAMBASTS DEMOCRATS

"The Democratic platform, on the other hand, is a series of walls, suspicions, of imputations. It is a platform of gloom and complaint. is a platform of vagaries holding out promises of relief for imaginary wrongs and injustices. It promises repetition of governmental theories that have been a failure wherever tried. It is a hid for the votes of all peoples. The platform is a composite peoples. The platform is a composite of the farmers' alliance, the socialists and the bolsheviki. It is a universal panacea for all evils, real and imaginary, and the platform seems to have been made more for catching votes than for any other purpose. This, however, is an evil practiced by Readilican and Democrat alike

"And so, after going over the splendid record of prosperity and peace and full employment of labor at good wages that existed during the last four years of the Shoup administration and going over the failure of the Democratic administration that pre-ceded Shoup, the Post believes that the state of Colorado would be very much more presperous, better gov-erned and that people would be more contented and happy, that law and or der would be better maintained, by the election of the Republican ticket this fall in its entirety than it would by the election of the Democratic ticket."

The foregoing represents to a large extent the feeling of many Democrats themselves who are aligning themselves behind the Republican nominee. The Pueblo Star-Journal, the leading Democratic paper in Southern Colorado, has also come out for the Republican, state ticket. Here, as in North Dakota, Montana, Oregon and Iowa, the issues have become far more important than traditional party names or labels. The conservative forces of the state are grouped in support of the Republican nominee, while radicals, as well as large numbers of dissatisfied farmers who are getting low prices for their products, are turning to the Democratic nominse. umphed when issues in Colorado. The Republicans have the edge today, and til probably win, unless more of the farmers of the state can be stirred in favor of the Non-partisan league loctrine than are yet converted. would be Republican, as the criticism of the Harding administration has not mounted to much out here. The campaign turns on state issues, and there is little likelihood of any change in the present political makeup of the congressional delegation from Colorado.

SUIT IS ARGUED

The legality of the Pacific Telephone t Telegraph company's intervention in the suit brought by Robert G. Duncan, cree to Goldie La Fountaine from John R. Risley and Dora B. Shreve, against the Public Service Commission of Oregon, was questioned this morning in Federal Judge Bean's court by W. E. Richardson, counsel for the plain-

Richardson contended that the plaintiffs had a right to attack the order of the commission raising telephone rates without the company interfering. He held that the telephone company would have its remedy in case the court's verdict did not please it, by appealing the decision.

Richardson was supported by Bert E. Haney, counsel for the commission. both of whom are desirous of having the suit remanded back to the state SSUE IN COLORADO the suit was originally brought in the state court, after which the telephone company intervened. After the intervention the company had the sult transferred to the federal court, claiming diversity of citizenship. Both Richardson and Haney argued that it was unlawful to transfer a sult when all the defendants did not concur, and also held that the law did not grant the intervenor the right to request a transfer. It was also argued that the federal court lacked jurisdiction. Objection was also raised to the tele-phone company claiming in its inter-vention that there was evidence of collusion between the plaintiffs and public service commissi on, Both attorneys argued that if the telephone company had any such evidence it should be presented to the court in a separate suit and not made an issue n the pending suit. Practically the entire morning session was taken up by Richardson and Haney. Shortly before noon Omar C. spencer, counsel for the telephone company, started his rebuttal by re-Spencer, counsel riewing several orders and hearings of the public service commission. an early hour this afternoon he had not answered the arguments of the other attorneys.
