

COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE MAY OPEN ON NOVEMBER 20

Enthusiastic Support Promised Movement at Meeting of Newspaper Publicity Division

Monday, November 20, probably will be the date for beginning the drive for the 1923 Community Chest.

At a meeting Saturday of the newspaper publicity division of the Chest organization, of which Ira F. Powers is chairman, it was voted to petition the executive committee to advance the date of the opening of the drive to allow time for the passing of the Livestock Exposition and for a clearing of the smoke of battle incident to the election, November 7.

The unanimous support of the newspapers of the city was assured at this meeting which was attended by the entire committee as follows: Chairman Powers, L. H. Wheeler, associate publisher of the Telegram; Paul Kelly, news editor of the Oregonian; Donald J. Sterling, managing editor of The Journal, and Fred L. Boalt, editor of the News. Plans for unusual activity on the part of the papers covering both the news and feature elements of the drive were outlined.

W. B. Ayer, a member of the advisory committee of the 1922 Community Chest, said: "When the Community Chest plan was first submitted to the people of Portland I was a reluctant subscriber, but after watching its operations for two years, I have become convinced that the plan is right and that its advantages to the institutions which it aids and to the community as a whole necessitate its being perpetuated. I am an enthusiastic believer in and supporter of the Community Chest."

"The Community Chest has demonstrated its usefulness to the community," said Ben Seizing, a member of the advisory committee. "It is the most economic method of collecting funds for the various charities. It scrutinizes the accounts of the various organizations and makes for better work. Cities like Cleveland that have used the chest for three or four years are realizing more and more its economy and efficiency. Every citizen should make the largest possible contribution and have it ready when the solicitor calls in order to save his time, which he is contributing as well as his funds."

'WOBLIES' DEFY POLICE IN WARFARE

materialized, although the police kept up a vigilance in all railroad yards.

Out of about 100 vagrants taken before Judge Ekwall Saturday, a large per cent had been up before him previously and they were immediately dismissed. The police had evidently paid little attention to whether the offending men who had already gone through the mill. Two men were turned loose and 10 minutes later they were back before the judge.

"They went directly from the station to the I. W. W. hall at 10 1/2 Second street," Chief Inspector Moore explained.

However, when up previously they had freely admitted to Judge Ekwall that they were I. W. W. They had made no bones about it, and the judge had felt compelled to treat them in spite of that, inasmuch as they had money and could not properly be classed as vagrants.

Judge Ekwall's "wheeze" from the bench Saturday afternoon when he said that the proceedings the previous day had made somewhat of a radical out of him also, was mistaken by a few serious-minded people.

The judge, of course, was only deceiving to a less serious frame of mind, and, besides, practical jokers on the police force had filled out an I. W. W. card and slipped it on his desk, so his statement was technically right.

The judge denied that his attitude had changed in the least since the campaign began.

"We cannot hold these men simply because they are I. W. W.," he said. "If they are vagrants, without means of support, we can hold them, and all such men we are going to run out of town."

While full crews of longshoremen were reported by H. S. Eaton, manager of the waterfront Employers' union, to be at work on all of the 17 ships busy in Portland harbor Saturday, the longshoremen's union said that the ranks of that organization continued solidly on strike.

Eaton reported that approximately 425 men were available for work on the waterfront and that a surplus had been created for the heavier business along the waterfront next week.

It was reported by all shipping companies and agents that satisfactory working of all ships had been made in the port. The only source of trouble seemed to be a slight shortage of grain handlers, who joined the waterfront strike.

The brunt of the picket duty has fallen on the shoulders of the union longshoremen since the drive against the I. W. W. strikers has forced most of these men from the picket lines maintained outside the docks.

The secretary of the Longshoremen's union said that the men had determined to remain away from work. He also reported that there had been no overtures made by the employers for negotiations.

75 NEOPHITES ARE INITIATED

Grotto Folk Hold Parade Preceding Ceremonial at The Auditorium.

Seventy-five neophytes from Portland, Salem and Eugene were initiated Saturday night into the mysteries of Gul Rezaee Grotto, this being the second ceremony of the Grotto since 1922. The first was held in May, when 33 were initiated.

The candidates assembled at The Auditorium at 5:30 o'clock, and then followed a business meeting and supper at 6:45 the Grotto folk had a parade, ending at The Auditorium and immediately thereafter began the ceremonial.

G. A. Peaster, monarch, was the presiding officer, and Robert E. Fulton was director of a committee of about 40 members who staged the spectacular features of the ceremonial in a setting of special scenery owned by Gul Rezaee Grotto. Frank Lucas was band director, and S. L. Seeman director of the newly organized oriental band, which made its first appearance at this time. The oriental band numbers 42 members who appeared in Persian robes of yellow and purple and each wore a venerable beard. Candidates were initiated for Caliph Grotto of Eugene and El Karaz Grotto of Salem, new grottoes established recently under special dispensation. There were several visitors present from Seattle.

CHICAGO EDITOR PREDICTS LARGE POPULATION HERE

E. C. Hole Believes Portland Will Have 1,500,000 Persons Within Few Years.

"Portland will be a very large city, and before very long," said E. C. Hole, editor of the American Lumberman of Chicago, yesterday, after having spent three days looking over the city and environs.

"I million and a half of people, I can readily picture here in my mind, within a few years.

"Twenty-five years ago Chicago had a population of 600,000; today the number is something like 3,000,000, and I can see almost a repetition in Portland of the growth of my home city.

"The Pacific Northwest is just beginning to come into its own. The cities are stepping into the large metropolitan class, and Portland is one of them. I have been here several times—the last two years—and note a wonderful progress, opportunities seemingly on every hand.

LUMBER BIG ASSET
"The lumber industry here is entering an era of great activity, and it is attracting the attention of the rest of the country. Do you know that the lumber of Oregon now coming East in increasing quantities is advertising the state and drawing new people. It is.

"There is to be a very strong demand for lumber for some time to come. The nation's housing problem is still serious. Our building program is still three years behind. In the East a great many young men and young women, married, are still living with their parents, because of the scarcity of houses, and we all know that there is no house big enough for two families. These wants must be supplied and Oregon is going to help fill them with its wonderful lumber.

TRADE DEVELOPS

"A few years ago very little lumber from the Pacific Northwest went to the Atlantic seaboard. Since the opening of the Panama canal this trade has developed rapidly and now millions upon millions of feet move through that channel from the Pacific Northwest to the Atlantic coast ports, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and others.

"Oregon lumber is becoming known to the men who finance buildings and those who do the actual work and it is taking the place of the yellow pine which is now over the peak. Greater and greater will be the demand for the Oregon lumber as the yellow pine disappears."

Mr. Hole is fostering a reforestation plan in the central states that is expected will, to some extent, lend variety to the panorama of the prairie states. He proposes that land on which trees are planted be exempted from taxation. He thinks every farm should have a certain amount of acreage in forest for home use.

Mr. Hole left for Seattle last night, but plans to pay Portland another visit possibly this week, before starting for his home by way of San Francisco.

Simpson Memorial Association Plans To Collect Funds

The Samuel L. Simpson Memorial association has announced Friday, November 10, as the time for raising funds to erect a monument to the memory of one of Oregon's most loved poets.

The association urges all persons throughout the state, including pioneers, alumni and students of Willamette university and those who admire the poetry of Simpson to assist in helping to raise this fund. The money may be sent to A. N. Bush at Salem, who is treasurer. It is also recommended that Samuel Simpson's birthday anniversary be observed with literary exercises in every county in schools and other organizations. P. H. D'Arcy is president of the memorial association, Lillian M. Hackleman secretary.

Samuel L. Simpson was born November 10, 1845, in Missouri, came with his parents to Oregon in 1846 and died in Portland June 14, 1900. He was a graduate of the Willamette university in the class of 1867 and was admitted to the bar as a practicing attorney in 1867.

TRUMAN ADAMS HEIRS FILE SUIT, CHARGING FRAUD

Following the suit filed during the week by Albert Bryson against William Kennard, alleging fraud in the sale of the department store of Kennard & Adams to himself and his mother, heirs of the late Truman L. Adams, Saturday, filed suit against trustees of the Adams estate, charging misadministration.

Roy Adams and Mabel T. Adams, by her guardian, Theast H. Johnson, are plaintiffs against Kennard and George W. Bates Jr., an east side banker, and Harry L. Raffety, their attorney, the two former being trustees for the affairs of Adams.

The complaint sets forth that Adams died August 17, 1917, leaving a will in which Kennard and Bates were named executors and trustees. All the property except $2500 in cash and the home, which was left to the widow in lieu of her dower, went to Roy and Mabel Adams, brother and sister of the deceased, being placed in charge of the trustees for their benefit, share and share alike.

PARTNERSHIP RECALLED
It is set forth that at the time of his death, Adams was an equal partner with Kennard in the department store and that the stock was worth $26,871.52, with an indebtedness of $15,850. It is alleged that Raffety was employed as attorney for the executors and trustees; that they fraudulently conspired to induce the appraisers to place the value of the partnership property at $15,000 when the share of Adams alone was worth $30,640.77. It is alleged that this was done so that Kennard could purchase the Adams interest at a price less than its actual value, and that the sale was made at a loss to the plaintiffs of $13,146.77.

The complaint alleges that the profits of the business for the years from August 17, 1917, to August 28, 1918, were in excess of $12,000, while the profits for 1918 were $18,450, but that the plaintiffs have been paid only $7500 for the sale of the Adams partnership to William Kennard and that no accounting has been made of profits during the time the business was conducted by the trustees. The plaintiffs declare that fraud was practiced on the court and ask that the final report of the executors be annulled, the sale be declared void, the trustees be required to give an accounting for the profits of the business while in their control, and that they be removed.

The final accounting was made September 27, 1918. All of the parties at interest in this suit, and in the Bryson suit, which naturally is of allied interest, are prominent east side people. It is said there are various angles to the situation which may develop as the legal actions proceed and which may become highly interesting.
