

SURPRISES MARK G.O.P. VICTORY IN IDAHO ELECTION

Senator Borah's Stand Strengthens Progressives, but Not Enough to Win Big Offices.

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 11.—With all predictions heard from except a few in outlying, almost inaccessible places, returns from which will not be received before the first of the week, the election of Lieutenant Governor C. C. Moore, Republican gubernatorial candidate, and the entire Republican state ticket is conceded by Democrats and Progressives.

Taus ended one of the most interesting political campaigns Idaho has ever experienced. Many surprises marked the campaign, among them: The leaving of life-long members of one party for another party; state-wide interest of three parties in the direct primary issue as a state-wide principle for election of officers; the campaign in favor of the direct primary by United States Senator Willam Borah; the big vote polled by the Progressive party.

ARITHMETIC FOR MOORE

The Progressives, their cause seemingly strengthened by Senator Borah's campaign for the direct primary and his reputation of the Republican state platform, came out second in the race. C. C. Moore carried 25 of 41 counties; H. F. Samuels, Progressive gubernatorial candidate, carried 19 counties; and M. Alexander, Democrat, held six counties.

The Republicans will be in control of the lower house in the 1923 legislature, with the senate control in doubt. The majority of the members of both houses are pledged to the re-narration of a state-wide direct primary law.

Will H. Hornbrook, Democratic state chairman, says, concerning the election: "The arithmetic favored the election of C. C. Moore. There were three paramount issues: the abolishment of the cabinet form of government, the passage of a bank guaranty bill, and the enactment of a state-wide direct primary law.

"The Democratic and Progressive candidates took the same position on these issues, while the Republican nominee took a contrary view. Those who favored the legislation of this character split their votes between Alexander and Samuels with the result that Moore was elected.

TIME TURNED TIDE

"Moreover, the friends of Senator Borah for the most part voted for Samuels, the Progressive candidate, and carried with them a large independent vote upon which a minority party must always depend for success. However, if the election had been held three weeks ago Alexander would have won."

Ray McKale, one of the leaders in the Progressive party, says: "When one realizes that our Progressive party was born July 1 and that we had only 30 days in which to put a county organization in each county, it becomes clear that we had a big job. We carried the counties in which we had organizations. There is great satisfaction among the members of the Progressive party that our organization is now one of the major parties of the state. Mr. Samuels put up a whirlwind campaign. His speech was high class and won many votes. We believe that we will win in 1924."

Senator Borah returned Tuesday to Washington, D. C. He closed his campaign in Idaho with a speech at Nampa in the Majestic theatre and the high school auditorium. He spoke in the theatre and through radio his speech was heard in the auditorium also. Both houses were packed to the fullest and hundreds of people, clamoring for admission, were turned away from both places.

STELL AGAINST TARIFF

At the close of his speech some one asked Senator Borah for information regarding his stand on the tariff question. "I voted against the tariff bill," said Senator Borah. "I have no apologies to offer. I would vote against a tariff bill as long as it establishes a tariff that is greater than the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad. Do you know that the tariff passed by the last congress raises the duty in some instances to as high as 400 per cent? I will resign my office before I will vote for a measure that places such a burden upon the people of this country."

Regarding the ship subsidy Senator Borah said that he stands unalterably opposed to a measure that will permit the loaning of money from the treasury of the United States at 2 per cent to those who desire to build up a merchant marine.

"If we have any 2 per cent money to lend, let's lend it to the farmers of this country who are finding it impossible almost to borrow money at any price," said Senator Borah, while he big audience cheered him to the echo.

OPEN RIVER PLAN IS HUGE IN SCOPE

Canalized Columbia Water Power Electric Plants, Included in Far-Reaching Program.

Canalized Columbia water power electric plants generating thousands of horsepower of energy, hundreds of thousands of acres reclaimed from the siltbrush—these are the objectives of the open river conference which is to be held at Pendleton next Friday. Three states will be represented—Washington, Idaho and Oregon. Joseph N. Teal, long a leader in the campaign for the utilization of the Columbia, will make the keynote address, followed at the morning session by an interpretation of the government's part in the effort which will be offered by Major George Mayo and Fred C. Schubert of the United States engineer corps.

Many of the interior communities will be represented by speakers at the afternoon session. Walla Walla will be represented by Mayor Ben F. Hill. Other delegates from Walla Walla will be: Dr. O. J. Keating, president of the Walla Walla Commercial club; Dr. S. B. L. Penrose, president of Whitman college; Colonel Paul H. Weyrauch and Ben G. Stone. The speaker for Umatilla will be D. C. Brownell; for Baker, Walter E. Meacham; for Kennewick-Pasco, L. A. Safford; for Boardman, W. A. Goodwin. S. H. Boardman will be one of the Boardman delegates. Speakers representing Lewiston, Spokane, Seattle and Astoria are yet to be announced, but each of these places is arranging to send delegates.

Delegates to the notable conference will be entertained at dinner Friday evening by the Pendleton Commercial association, which will also have charge of the program. J. Z. Barr, secretary of the association, is attending to the details of this program.

Patriotism Shown At Polls in Peace Times, Says Peck

Oregon Civic League Members and their friends at the Benson hotel Saturday noon heard Major Cassius R. Peck on "Armistice Day," and all that the title implies.

Peck would his talk around to the lesson of citizenship in peace time and the liberty and duty of the ballot. "There are 75,000 Portland citizens who did not go to the polls at the last election," said Peck, "and in consequence there are 75,000 Portlanders who should be on a patriotic black list."

Peck believes that there are too many men who believe that patriotism is a term used exclusively during war time. "The greatest test of man's patriotism," he said, "is the character of his citizenship during peace. It's the every day thing that counts in every walk of life."

Peck is first past commander of the Portland post of the American Legion. He was instrumental in drafting the national constitution of that organization. During the war he was camp judge advocate at Camp Upton, New York.

Rankin Expresses Thanks for Great Majority Tuesday

John Howard Rankin, county commissioner-elect, in a letter sent to The Journal, desires that his appreciation be expressed to the people of Portland for their support in the recent election.

"Will you kindly express to the people of Multnomah county my deep appreciation of the overwhelming expression of confidence and good will as indicated in their vote last Tuesday."

"I am sure that nothing less than fair, honest, efficient administrative service to all the people of this county is the earnest desire of the 47,843 voters who elected me commissioner of Multnomah county, and to the discharge of this important responsibility I shall give my best efforts, trusting that in the rendering of this service in connection with my colleagues there shall be unity of thought and action seeking to accomplish the highest efficiency in the administration of the various departments of county government consistent with conservative expenditures of the funds of the taxpayers."

Pope Will Appoint 2 New Cardinals In U. S., Is Rumor

Rumors are current in local Catholic circles that two new American cardinals are to be appointed by the pope at the first consistory of the pontificate in Rome.

Accompanying the rumors is the prediction that the honor will fall on Archbishop George W. Mundelein of Chicago and Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes of New York. The consistory, which would be of world interest, as the pope would deliver his first encyclical at that time, containing the program of his pontificate, is declared to have been set for the first fortnight of December.

Should these two archbishops be made cardinals, Catholics in the United States will be represented in the sacred college by four cardinals. The present cardinals are Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, and Cardinal Dougherty, archbishop of Philadelphia. Should Archbishop Mundelein of Chicago be elevated, it would be the first time in the history of the Catholic church that an archbishop west of the Allegheny mountains has been named a cardinal.

School for Dyers and Cleaners Will Be Local Addition

Establishment of a cleaners' and dyers' school in this city has been made possible through the setting aside of an appropriation by the National Dry Cleaners' association and the government, according to an announcement made today by the Portland Association of Dry Cleaners. Classes will be held in the Y. M. C. A. building.

The course of instruction to be given will be of a post-graduate nature and will be only for those having advanced knowledge of cleaning methods. This school will be conducted under the department of vocational education of the state through its representative, A. R. Nichols, and under the national association through its representative, C. C. Hubbard.

Purpose of the school will be to teach more advanced cleaning methods, create public confidence in dry cleaning and create a demand for cleaning service. The school has issued a call for the sending in of difficult pieces to clean to the school. The school may be reached by calling Main 821.
