

COMMUNITY CHEST CONTRIBUTIONS COMING STEADILY

Commercial artists of the city are aiding greatly in the publicity department of the Community Chest campaign by giving their services daily in making sketches and rapid-fire cartoons on various phases of the Community Chest in downtown store windows. On Friday the artists will include Norman Louis Egan, Guy Savage, Roy Rogers and James King, and they will be in the windows of the Powers Furniture company, Bush & Lane, the Frederick Post company, Tomlins and the Cassidy Tire company.

One would never accuse A. F. Fiebel of telling fairy stories, but that is exactly what he has been doing this week. However, they were fairy stories about the Community Chest and some of its little wards in the baby homes and children's institutions. Mr. Fiebel is one of the chest's most faithful speakers, and this week he has written a number of essays on the story in fairy form for the little ones. From the primary rooms he went to the upper grades, but he did not make speeches, but told the older pupils to learn from their younger brothers and sisters about the chest and then write short essays on it. These first to be submitted to the parents and later to the teachers for grading, the idea being that in this way the entire family will talk about the chest. He offered three prizes at the Hudson and at the Hosford schools—$2.50, $1.50 and $1.

SCHOOL GETS CHEST

The Franklin primary school, having been overlooked in the distribution of miniature chests for the children's contributions, called up headquarters and asked that a chest be sent out. It was dispatched at once. The principal of the Irvington school has assured the chest officials that that school will be 100 per cent in the matter of contributions. The chest story will be told Friday in the Couch, Oakley Green and Gregory Heights schools. This evening it will be told at a meeting of the Knights of Security. Walter G. Gleason is in charge of the fraternal division of the speakers' bureau and he reports that through his assistants 50 of the fraternal organizations have been reached with speakers.

Judge John H. Stevenson will be the speaker at the indicator Friday at noon and the massed Salvation Army bands will furnish music. Dr. E. H. Fencio, head of the speaker's bureau, will speak over the Oregonian radio Friday evening at 9 o'clock. Among the industries that are being reached with speakers today are the Montgomery Ward company, the American Can company and the Y. M. C. A. auto school. Dr. Fencio requests that members of the speaker's bureau do not allow other engagements to conflict with requests for Chest talks during the remainder of the drive, as this work is considered vital to the success of the campaign.

PLAYLET REPEATED

The Reed college playlet, "The Heart of Portland," given with such success Wednesday at the meeting of the ad club, is being repeated today at the meeting of the Progressive Business Men's club. The skit was arranged by Anne Shepard and Eliza Armstrong as a contribution from the Drama club of the college to the Chest campaign's publicity department. It is a type of allegory which such characters as the Man and Woman Who Don't Care, played by Katharine Forbes and Raleigh Meyers, the Heart of Portland, taken by Beatrice Olson, the Woslan from the Streets, Frances Barbey, the Down-and-Out Man, Bob Kennicot, Orphan Girl, Alice Abbott, Boy Scout, James Warrick, Dependent Aged Couple, Florence Craven and Victor Reid, Nurse, Virginia Willis.

The skit will be presented at a number of meetings held down town for the purpose of stirring up enthusiasm and spreading propaganda for the Community Chest drive.

MOVIES ASSISTING

The motion picture, "Help," showing the work of the various institutions with close-ups of the every-day life of the inmates, is being shown today at the luncheon meetings of the Portland

Realty board and the Lions club at the Hotel Multnomah.

Offers of services are coming in to headquarters from leaders of nationality groups. The Japanese consul, Y. Takeda, has offered to have solicitation made of the Japanese people of the city and the Chinese Benevolent society and Lee Hong are doing a similar work among the Chinese population.

On account of illness Lloyd Bates was obliged to give up his place as colonel in division 1. R. H. Thomas has been appointed to fill the vacancy and within a few hours he had his organization of captains completed and in the field.

Mrs. O. W. Taylor, colonel in the residential campaign, has formed the following strong group of captains to assist her in the drive:

Miss Elsie Miller, Mrs. T. T. Nelson, Mrs. Cautlan, Miss Lavinia Rogers, Mrs. W. F. Witaly, Mrs. W. Schmuckel, Mrs. F. Bruntage, Mrs. Wickus, Mrs. Floyd Maxwell, Mrs. H. C. Dodson, Mrs. Lanning, Miss Gladys Ellsworth, Mrs. Wall, Mrs. Lova.

JAPANESE CHILD FEATURE

Of the many babies from the various institutions that have been on view during the week in downtown windows by way of informing the public what the Chest does, none has attracted more attention than the little Japanese child shown in the Waverly Baby home window at Sherman & Clay. The little almond-eyed kiddie has been the center of great interest on the part of both Americans and Japanese and has been productive of many questions concerning the home and its work.

Babies of all nationalities are received at the home and within the past year there have been Mexicans, Negroes, Italians and Japanese babies in the home.

A phase of baby home work that is little known by the public is that one involving the young, unmarried mother, who, when her parents discover her condition, turn her adrift, or else compel her to relinquish her child, when it is born. These are the little mothers who come to the home with their babies. Very few of them relinquish their hold on the little ones at once. They will try for weeks and months to make a way to keep them before finally giving them up.

GIRL GETS POSITION

Recently a girl sought the shelter of the home, her mother having told her that unless she got rid of the baby she would go to the courts and tell the whole story. Through the efforts of the home and the child welfare commission, a position has been secured for the girl, she is "going straight" and the baby is being cared for in the home.

A Portland couple in search of a baby to adopt was strongly attracted to a baby in the home whose mother had not relinquished her hold on it. She was communicated with, and her answer was to the effect that though it broke her heart to give the little fellow up, she was willing to do so, as she knew he would go into a better home than she could provide for him and she wanted him to have a better chance than she had had.

It is an interesting fact that when a couple adopts a baby, before they have had the child a year they almost invariably come after another one. Many babies reach the home through the courts, they have been found neglected or abandoned. During the past year many undernourished babies have been brought into the home by local physicians to be built up. While this is not the real work of the home, no opportunity to be of service to a helpless infant is refused. Without exception, each one of these wretched little beings has been brought up to normal and was soon playing about with the other children and later returned to their parents, who, either for lack of money or lack of knowledge often to care for their little ones, had neglected them.

UPTON NEEDS ONE VOTE TO WIN RACE

attempt to organize the state senate developed into such an intricate tangle as now exists. It started, in reality, from the compact of the Sage Brush Seven to stand together for the election of an Eastern Oregon man first, or someone friendly to that section of the state as an alternative.

Then Hall's offer to come in with the candidates of Upton came and was accepted, and immediately all the influences of the Federate Patriotic societies swung in behind his candidacy. This condition, not visioned at the time by Ritzer, Taylor, Strayer, Dennis and possibly Edwards, strained the hands that had bound the Sage Brush Seven together, and drove Corbett of Multnomah away entirely.

Bound by their compact to stay with an Eastern Oregon senator as a unit, however, the four Eastern Oregon senators stuck, hoping to win some of the valley senators over to their side. When Klepper and Smith came over it nearly set off the fireworks, but after a long wrangle they agreed to stick it out, with the more or less definite understanding, however, that if Moser climbed in they would jump out.

When Moser blew up and his two followers went into the Upton group, Corbett, Dunn and Johnson, who had been up to that time unattached, went over to Eddy, completing the deadlock beyond hope of victory for either side, unless and until time and weariness causes some one or more to let go and abandon their pledges, or until either Upton or Eddy decide there is nothing to be gained by holding their forces together longer, and swing into some compromise.

FORCE INTACT

From a practical working standpoint Upton would seem to be in a more or less uncomfortable position even if he finally should win the necessary 18th vote and the gavel. His force is remaining intact, and if he wins will stay with him, only because they gave their pledges. But he has a bunch of restive senators in his camp, divided into two factions, fundamentally at loggerheads one with the other.

It would require some generalship to guide an organization steam roller in time of stress and necessity that depended upon such an assembly of camps and gears. Under such circumstances it might well develop that the organization would become the minority at those very moments of trial when a majority was vitally necessary to the organization plan.

More and more as the battle for the presidency has progressed it has become apparent that the issue of Klan and anti-Klan is to be not at all dormant and forgotten during the senate's 40 working days. There are supposed to be some five senators, led by Hall of Coos, who are affiliated with or friendly to the Federate Patriotic societies, while four others, afflicted with or friendly to the Klan, are lead store will determine. Some of the Klan are in the Eddy line up, all of the Patriotic society group in the Upton camp, with Moser out alone. All in all it is a condition possible of many potentialities, even to the ultimate organization of the senate on a strict Klan and anti-Klan basis, an eventually that time and the winding patience of some of the sen-
