Irvington Club Benefit Ball Is Success

By Hazel Haney A LARGE affair was the Irvington Thanksgiving ball Monday night at Christensen hall, given for the benefit of the Irvington club building fund. Tall standards filled with chrysanthemums in yellow, bronze and ochre tones, blended with the lovely gowns, added color and brilliancy to the scene.

One of the enjoyable affairs given for Miss Charlie R. Fenon, popular bride-elect, was the luncheon at which preceding the wedding of Miss Dorothy Metcalf and Mr. Willard P. Hawley Jr. They included the Misses Lillian Mitchell, Janet House, Margaret Cook, Susanna Caswell, Helen West, Harriet Griffith and Mary Helen Spaulding, and Messrs. Dudley Avery, Herbert Sessions, Herbert Malarky, William Fenton, Robert Burnside, Fritz Henningsen and Harry Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Travis were in town over the week-end en route from California to Seattle. They were the guests of Mrs. Travis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Hunt.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McKenzie will be hosts to a large dancing party at the Ambassador apartments Wednesday evening. About 50 guests have been invited.

One of the smart affairs of the week will be the dancing party given by Mr. and Mrs. Philip L. Jackson at their home Wednesday evening. The guests include members of the younger married set.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Miller are sojourning at Del Monte, Cal. They left last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew D. Norris will

DRESS

This Morning Dress Is Delightfully Simple and Youthful

Among the interesting morning dresses that have been introduced this season, this model of tan crepe roman is perhaps one of the most favored because of its charming simplicity. The belt, cut in one piece with the long-waisted blouse, tops the gathered skirt and gives a suggestion of a robe. The separate two-piece skirt is attached to a lining canvas.

Foreigner Must Live Ideals Of America

By Vella Winser "AMERICAN" ideals cannot be taught, they must be lived; then and only then will there be kindled in the souls of the immigrants a yearning to the point of passion to give their hearts to America," said Dr. C. M. Panunzio, professor of social sciences at Williams college, university, addressing the Portland Women's Research club on "Immigration from an Immigrant's Point of View," at its monthly luncheon meeting held Monday at the Hotel Multnomah.

Dr. Panunzio painted a brilliant word picture of the longing of the foreign born for life in America of his savings to the point of passion to pay his passage, of his high hopes, aspirations and dreams as he sights the statue of Liberty—and then of his disillusionment when faced with actual conditions. The speaker deplored any sort of compulsion as a means of Americanization, declaring that the period of wholesale deportations in 1915 and 1922 drove immigrants into more compact communities than ever before and cited as a suggestion of what might be the outcome of compulsion, discrimination against the Irish years ago when they were not acceptable in any sort of public position, has led to a point today, where if you hope to get elected to a public office you must be Irish.

The program opened with a medley of national airs played by Miss Elizabeth Levy, violinist, with Lucien E. Becker at the piano. Katherine Neal Simons sang "The American Song" with Paul Johns, flutist and Miss Mildred Raymond, accompanist. Mrs. R. W. Jamieson was chairman of the day. Marshall N. Dana made an appeal on behalf of the Community Chest.

A well-attended business meeting followed the luncheon at which $50 was voted for the American League fund and the Oriental college fund and $50 was voted to the Community Chest to be paid in monthly installments of $5, beginning January 1.

BURGESS' BEDTIME STORIES

The Danger Point

By Thornton W. Burgess When near danger point watch out! Stop, look and listen all about.

PETER RABBIT, who, as you know, had many narrow escapes from danger every day, and therefore has to be continually watching out, was almost envious of Paddy the Beaver and Mrs. Paddy, who watched them towing food logs through their new pond on their way to the old pond where their food pile was to be. While they were swimming they were safe from all enemies. Peter, you know, never is really safe outside his dear Old Briar-patch, and even there he must watch for Shadow, the Weasel.

"They are bigger than I and stronger, and so better able to fight. Yet they can go and come in safety with nothing to worry about, while I must be on the watch for danger every instant," thought Peter. "That doesn't seem fair to me. No, sir, it doesn't seem fair." You see Peter had quite forgotten that Paddy and Mrs. Paddy had made that safety for themselves by hard work.

But things are not always as they seem. There was one danger point which Peter had overlooked, but which Paddy and Mrs. Paddy were fully aware of. It was the place where they had to drag their food logs over the new dam to float them, down the Laughing Brook to the old pond. There, of course, they had to come out of the water.

But if Peter had overlooked this danger point Paddy and Mrs. Paddy had not. They knew it was the one place where such enemies as Towler the Bob Cat or Old Man Coyote might have a chance to spring on them, before they knew it, that sooner or later Towler or Old Man Coyote or both would discover that place and lie in wait for them. So they had chosen with the greatest of care the spot where those logs were to be dragged across the dam. They meant to take no chances. They chose a place almost in the middle of the dam and where the water in the pond was deepest.

America by Hendrik van Loon

MEANWHILE General Howe, who had been obliged to leave Boston as soon as the rebels had taken the commanding heights around that famous city, had returned safely to Halifax and was reorganizing his defeated troops. The most important city on the Atlantic coast was New York, and both Washington and Howe made for it. But Washington got there first. Howe was obliged to stay in Halifax until he could collect supplies and recruits. This gave Washington plenty of time to fortify the city. If you have ever been in New York you will know that it is shaped like a long thin finger, pointing southwards, with the Hudson river on the west and the East river on the east. At the south end of the finger is New York bay. Howe, sailing down from Halifax, would enter this bay, and then try to take the city. Washington, therefore, put earth works and heavy guns down around the Battery, as the lower end of New York is called, and more earthworks and guns on Governor's island, in the mouth of East river, and still more on the other side of the Hudson river, near the tip of the finger. For fear that Howe might pass by in spite of all these guns, and sail up the Hudson and attack New York from the north, Washington built two forts a little ways above the city, thus above the spit where the city was then. Their ruins are now situated near 183d street. The fort on the Jersey side was called Fort Lee and the fort on the New York side was called Fort Mifflin. Then Washington sent General Nathaniel Greene and 7000 men over to Brooklyn, to keep the English from slipping across East river. The English governor of New York, Governor Tryon, and all the citizens who remained loyal to King George were told to move out to Staten island and there they gave General Howe a warm welcome when he arrived there on June 25. By August he had collected 32,000 men, and his brother, Earl Howe, had arrived from England with a strong fleet, which lay in the lower part of the harbor, safely out of range of Washington's guns down at the Battery.

All through the early part of the summer 1776, the two armies were busy drilling, getting their supplies in order and keeping a wary eye on the other fellow, until the twenty-second of August, when things began to happen. The weather was very hot. So was the fighting which now commenced.

League Helps Many Girls In Need

A SPLENDID piece of work is being done by the Catholic Women's League along lines of social welfare, administering relief, operating an employment bureau and in the conduct of Americanization classes, as well as in operating a cafeteria where an average of 85 girls are served daily with home cooked meals at a nominal cost. During the past year 1810 meals were served free to needy and indigent persons. The league rooms are in the Eilers building, corner Fourth and Washington streets. A rest room affords opportunity for relaxation during the noon hour or at any time. A total of 1157 persons were placed in positions during the past year and 31 families were furnished clothing, fuel or food, and many received medical and dental care free of charge through the efforts of the league. During the past year 65 girls and young women were enrolled in the plain sewing and millinery classes conducted in North Portland and this year Americanization classes are being organized for both children and adults in South Portland, with Mrs. A. J. Groben as instructor. The league furnishes free office room and telephone service for the Catholic Children's bureau. This bureau is a central headquarters for the field secretary of the child-caring institutions, of which there are four, whose duty it is to do the preventive

Three generations of splendidly developed children FOR sixty-four years mothers have been feeding their babies on Borden's Eagle Brand Milk. It has proved to be a fine body-building food for children who were normally healthy. And doctors recommend it for those who are undernourished and losing weight. No mother ought to experiment with her baby. There are no doubts about the purity of Eagle Brand or the results thousands of other mothers have obtained from it. For it is only pure country milk combined with sugar—the natural food if mother's milk fails. THE BORDEN COMPANY Borden Building New York
