

WHEAT SLACKENS, EXPORTS IN 1922 SHOW DECREASE

Portland's exports for the year will amount to $45,149,473. Clearances of foreign vessels at the customs house up to noon today showed a total cargo value and with little prospect of other clearances this year, the figure will probably stand as the grand total for 1922.

This shows a heavy decrease as compared with 1921, when foreign exports amounted to $64,846,274. The decrease, however, is accounted for entirely by the falling off of wheat exports, which has occurred over the entire Northwest on account of a lighter crop, slow movements from the interior of this season's crop, and other conditions which do not indicate any change in the general prosperity of the port.

Exports of $27,645,450. Total wheat exports for the year amounted to $27,645,450 bushels, valued at $37,645,450. In 1921 Portland wheat exports amounted to 37,240,987 bushels valued at $47,110,961.

Wheat shortage also accounts for a slight decrease in flour exports, which amounted to 1,102,610 barrels for the year, valued at $5,770,830, as compared with 1,298,041 barrels in 1921, valued at $7,489,100.

Lumber, on the other hand, shows a remarkable increase in foreign cargoes for the year. From 174,170,136 feet of lumber exported in 1921, the figure for 1922 mounted to 240,600,344 feet. Respective values for the two years were $4,402,856 and $5,808,803.

GENERAL REMAINS SAME. Exports of general cargo remained about the same in value. For 1922 general cargo amounted to $5,733,354, compared with $5,733,354 in 1921. Falling prices would have made this drop much greater but for the export of apples this year, which has greatly increased.

For monthly comparisons, general cargo for December shows a satisfactory increase over November in value, the figures being $1,186,196.88 and $822,120 respectively.

Lumber, likewise, mounted from 17,111,948 feet, valued at $482,798, to 19,099,487 feet, valued at $485,366. Each of these months showed huge increases over October, when only 10,965,737 feet of lumber was exported, indicating that foreign shipments have almost doubled in two months.

Wheat exports in December were 1,074,937 bushels, valued at $1,369,076, as compared with 1,900,026 bushels, valued at $2,152,502, for November.

Portland's Death Record for 1922

The stark struck a good stride in Portland during 1922 and outdistanced the grim reaper in fine style, according to figures shown in the annual report of Dr. George Farrah, city health officer, just completed.

This record shows that during the year there were 2016 more births than deaths in Portland during 1922. The births numbered 8304, and the deaths 6288.

The report shows that in the deaths there were more males than females, the former numbering 732 and the latter 456. There were 64 suicides and 214 deaths from external causes, mostly violent in their nature.
