American Secretary's Plan May Save Coming Premiers' Meeting From Ending in Deadlock

London, Dec. 30. - (U. P.) - Europ tonight looked to Secretary Hughes' reparations proposal to save next Tuesday's premiers' conference from hopeless deadlock and failure,

France, Britain and Germany tonight put finishing touches on their respective plans, which will be submitted to the allied leaders next week and it was apparent the three schemes are widely at variance. Moreover, Premiors Bonar Law and Poincare each secured the unqualified backing of their gov-ernments, making unyielding deadlock

The proposal of an unofficial international commission to consider reparations with American participation, therefore, was regarded as a lifesaver BRITAIN PLEASED

It was not at all likely that France would accept the Hughes plan per se, but it was considered probable that the French would urge that the matter be taken up at the Brussels parley, to which the United States has been in-

Britain has received the Hughes speech with applause and unofficial promise of cooperation. France received it coldly.

Reason for the difference is found in the divergent views held by the two countries toward the crux of the reparations problem. Britain's aim, as evidenced by the plan Bonar Law will carry to Paris, is to be as lenient as possible toward Germany, to get just as much as the defeated enemy can pay, not to ask too much, and to arrange terms so that naverage to arrange terms so that naverage to arrange terms so that naverage terms are the payment to arrange terms so that naverage terms are the payment to arrange terms are nade and trade kept up at the same France considers the main question is not how much shall Germany pay, but how much can she be forced to pay.

PLAN EXPLAINED The French rejected the Hughes plan because it did not provide for poercion. Britain accepted it because it opened the way to general agree-ent on the question.

The French plan, which was in the hands of Premier Poincare for final approval tonight, is as follows: To refuse Germany a moratorium until suitable guarantees are arranged, and have these guarantees include allied supervision of German finance, imposition of heavy taxes on the Ruhr, a customs barrier between the Rhineland and Germany, seizure of German-owned foreign securities, and rigid control along the border. WHAT BRITAIN OFFERS

The British plan, for which Bonar Law received the backing of his cab-

Reduction of the amount Germany must pay by at least a half more, if possible. Agreement among the allies to permit Germany to get to work and earn the sum without constant re-strictive measures by France. The German plan, which Dr. Karl Bergmann will carry to Paris next week, was outlined in an exclusive United Press dispatch as follows: Germany to pay the allies 40,000,000,-000 gold marks.

The allies or the United States, or both, to lend Germany a total of 20,-000,000,000 gold marks with which to help pay the lump reparations sum. This loan, Germany stipulates, should be made within not more than five years. Germany offers to give guarantees, but the Cuno government ad-mittedly is shaky over this point, for the Socialists, angry at not being in on details of the latest plan, may book the chancellor in the reichstag when he seeks legislation authorizing the guarantees such as the allies would de-

Demand for 1923 Auto Tags Drops With More Needed

Salem, Dec. 30. - Approximately 42,000 motor vehicle licenses of the vintage of 1923 had been issued when the automobile registration department in the office of Secretary of State Kozer closed its doors for the day and the year tonight. This means that but one third of the automobiles and trucks in the state, based on the registration of 134,566 for 1922, will be equipped with the new blue and white tags on New Years day. In spite of the fact that there are nearly 16,000 more motor vehicles in the state at this time than there were a year ago, applications for the new license plates this year up to the close of the year have run more than
