Change of Water Rates.

vesterday afternoon, it was decided to change the water rates, the change to go into effect to-day. The object is not so much to change the rates as it is to equalize them and this the board proposes to do. An examination has disclosed that some are charged too much some too little, and the only change will be equalizing the charges so that all will pay as nearly alike proportionally as possible. This is a wise action, and while it will probably not increase the revenues from the water works to any great extent, it water consumers.

A prominent physician and old army surgeon in eastern Iowa, was called away from home for a few days; during his absence one of the children contracted a severe cold and his wife bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for it. A STRANGE PERSONAL EXPER-IENCE.

Or What I Keep I Lose and What I Lose I Keep.

BY MRS. P. G. BARRETT.

In the winter of 1885, I was ill with what would now be called la grippe. The serious symptoms, lasting but a few days, were followed by distressing physical weakness, so that with mind alert and nerves quivering with impatience, I was obliged to lie by, at home, away The Chautauqua Club will meet at from the business which I knew was

Now it happened through all this miserable time, when I was unable to sit up, except at intervals, without faintness, that it did seem as though the whole church and neighborhood had turned itself into a procession of beggars.

Early in the season, for the looks of the thing, I had put my name to a subscription paper or two, But my wife's name appeared in so many lists that, though the sums were small, I could but say some pretty savage things.

One day it had been unusually exasperating; and I was relieving my mind when, in the midst of this tirade, my eldest son, who, with his sister, was a more upright position, broke in with alled completely, and dancing was mamma when every penny she gives Amazed, I stopped short, and looked to my wife for denial; but in tears, she I've hurt her feelings." "Apologize or leave the house," I shouted, and added with as much dignity as my prostrate At a meeting of the water commission attitude permitted, "You've told a preposterous falsehood!"

"Its the truth," he flashed back, "she she is," and he was gone.

I'd have struck him for saying it, if I stamped my feet against the foot-board will make the burden bear evenly on all in my rage, and commanded my trembing daughter to call her mother.

> After she went out I seemed to be filling; and then floating away, and then a long dreamless sleep came, from which I was awakened by music.

> Forgetful of what had passed I turned sounds came, and was surprised to find, at my side, dressed in glistening white, a brother who had died years ago.

"Harry!" I cried, and "Dear John," he whispered, putting his hand in mine, my weak fingers closing round it. "If I am in Heaven," I said, "what makes the silver sand at the foot of the steps. am in Heaven," I said, "what makes me so weak?" Just then the music, in which my sleeping senses had been steeped came nearer, and a train of shin-ing average swant by led by a woman at The Lord gave me one talent, money ing angels swept by, led by a woman, a

"See here." I demanded, "where are my desires?" for I knew how many my desires?" for I knew how many Look out for the new hotel at North times I'd had them and indulged myself Dalles. in dreams of how liberal I would be, once my own wants were satisfied.

Receiving no answer, I was ventilating my opinion of such manifest injustice when Harry stopped me by saying: "There are desires and desires, brother, prayers and prayers. Why should a man desire what he can hold in his hand if he choose, or pray when he may easily answer his own prayers?" "Do you mean to tell me," said I, "that it was my duty to give, even when there were other necessary ways for my money?" "To whom then, were you in debt?" he asked. "To no one," I replied "I took care of that, I was a good financier." "Who gave you that talent, and who sent such prosperity?"he asked more pointedly still. "I understand you now said I "you think a tenth was due to God." "I think," he said, "all is God's; but he put it out with you, what interest did you pay?" "What? why no name had a larger sum set down for minister's salary." "The butcher's bill, do you count that too?" said my brother with levity very unbecoming in an angel; but, seeing my frown, he continued, "We were talking of giving. Paying pastor's salary is merely settling accounts and very meanly are they settled too, at times. Men should think what life is in the lands without the gospel, and count in all the light and blessedness of christain civilization when the paper comes round for pastor's salary, or church buildings or parsonage or school houses." "I have given good round sums the Mississippi river will be located at for all these things," said I, "but in this North Dalles and at least two other large New Jerusalem, which I was taught to has saved her morning eggs at the table think so blessed, it seems of no account. all winter, for her cent a day subscrip- This woman, for instance, never gave tion to missions, and, father," nearing even the 'widows mite' for such purthe door as he spoke, "I should think poses. "See here John," said my guide touching my eyes and behold on every stone I saw engraved in blue enamel 'shabbiness,' 'old clothes,' 'weariness.' 'hunger,' blistered feet,' 'caloused hands' 'chills' and 'frost-bite,' and side by side to ask my wife from whence the sweet in gold ran the name of the gift each deprivation had enabled her to make.

Quicker than a flash I recalled what my boy Harry-named for this angel at my side-had said the day I died. And I shrunk together out of sight of myself, covering my eyes and groveling in
