Bills have been introduced in the Oregon legislature asking appropriations for the improvement of wagon roads, which in the aggregate call for $49,000. So far the matter of making an appropriation for the Columbian exposition has not come up, and it is safe to say that a bill to appropriate $250,000 will not pass. There is too much money required for internal improvements, wagon roads and portage railroads that the people demand to help them. There is a growing sentiment that advertising Oregon is not going to help the farmer, and the farmer is the man who of all Oregonians needs help the most. Advertising Oregon will bring the people here, but that is not what is wanted just yet, so much as transportation facilities by those already here. With an open river we have unlimited room for immigrants, but with the present transportation facilities immigrants are not wanted. The railroads are unable to carry to the seaboard the produce raised in Eastern Oregon and Washington now. What would be the result with double the amount produced? We want an open river, we want good wagon roads, we want our mountains made passable and communities connected, we want many things for the benefit of "we the people" who are here now. It is not to be doubted that a good exhibit at Chicago would redound to Oregon's credit and benefit. No man, no newspaper man especially will gainsay the power and profit of advertising. We certainly do not, but at the same time we assert that Eastern Oregon at least is not prepared for any extended immigration, until the river is open, and abundant transportation facilities furnished. When we have these we are ready to advertise, but not until our goods are on the shelves, and we are ready for business. The following telegram from Tacoma on the 13th is apropos:

TACOMA, Jan. 13.—A large percentage of the wheat raised in Eastern Washington is being shipped east to Duluth and Minneapolis, because there are no facilities on the western coast to handle it. All the sidetracks between here and Pasco are full of wheat cars, and so are the yards here. The railroad hasn't enough cars to haul it because the shippers cannot unload them after they get here. Most of the wheat has left the Palouse country, though it will continue to come into Tacoma for some time yet.

It will be seen that the Northern Pacific has flooded Tacoma with wheat, and the immense surplus is glad to seek a market at Duluth or St. Paul even though the long haul cuts deeply into the profits. In the face of such a condition do we need to advertise?

The two houses met in the hall of the house at Salem yesterday to canvass the vote for governor, and Sylvester Pennoyer was duly declared the governor of the state. He took the oath of office administered by Judge Strahan and at once proceeded to read his message. He is about the only man outside of the newspaper fraternity who will do so. The message consists of about 10,000 words or about twelve columns such as ours. He very wisely recommends that the legislature ask congress for an appropriation to build a portage railroad at The Dalles. This is the only thing that will give us speedy relief, we want portage railroads for the benefits to be derived while more permanent improvements are being made, and the governor has sounded a key note that will add to his unprecedented popularity. He also opposes the repeal of the usury law. A perusal of the document will show that the governor is close to the farmer's idea on this question, as on all others, and we believe he will carry a strong endorsement from the farmers, should his party tender him the presidential nomination.

Oregon can congratulate herself on the fact that her legislature has met, organized, and elected a United States senator without a quarrel, or shadow of one. There is hardly another state that can boast as much. Heretofore we of the north have been wont to look on with disgust at some of the bitter fights in the southern states over the possession of its offices, but in the light of recent events we will have to get off our high moral plane. Nebraska is almost on the verge of war over the governorship, Colorado is but little better over which faction shall run the legislature. Washington is having a bitter senatorial fight, and so it goes through a number of the northern states. We are glad indeed that Oregon has escaped all this; her legislature is in good working order, and that no bad blood or factional fights have occurred. The session is short and there is much work to be done. The friendly feeling will greatly facilitate matters and we hope that this legislature will make a record for good hard substantial work for the entire state of Oregon.

If there is one thing more annoying than the thousand other things that beset the pathway of newspaperdom to harass and grizzle the editor, it is the careless and slipshod manner in which a clipping from his paper is reprinted. In nine cases out of ten the compositor will change words on you, just enough to make your article to say the least awkward, and in many cases the change will make it ridiculous. There is only one way to avoid this worry, and that is to make it a rule never to look over your own article in your exchanges. The reason is plain, and that is that the proof reader knowing it is reprint does not change the wording where the spelling is correct. It is hardly carelessness it is just "cussedness," the perverseness of matter animate and inanimate, and it is useless to hope for any improvement.

PROVERBS OF THE SEA.

Forty Years Old Says for Those Who Sail the Ocean.

He, who would learn to pray should go to sea. When one falls into the sea he stays there. When you walk, pray once; when you go to sea, pray twice; when you go to be married, pray three times. Women are ships and must be manned. The sea refuses no river. All the rivers go to the sea, and it never overruns. The sea is not soiled because a dog stirs it up. To a drunken man the sea only reaches to the knees. If the sea boiled, where would one go to find water to cool it? What comes by starboard goes by larboard. Being at sea, sail; being on land, settle. He that will not sail till he have a full, fair wind will lose many a voyage. Unless you have the wind astern you must know how to navigate. You can not sail as you would, but as the wind blows. In a calm sea every man is a pilot. To a rotten ship every wind is contrary. What fear would he have of the waves who had Noah for a pilot? Every sea, great as it is, grows calm. A large ship needs much water. Where a ship can go the brigantine can go. It is easier to get away from the bank than from the bottom. The ship which doesn't mind her helm will mind the hidden rocks. He who can steer need not row. It will not do to have two mainmasts in a ship. Better lose an anchor than the whole ship. Good roller, good sailor. Do good and cast it into the sea; if the fish ignore it, God will know it. If clouds look like they had been scratched by a hen, get ready to reef your topsails then. He who sends a mean man to sea will get neither fish nor salt. Every port serves in a gale. A mariner must have his eyes on the rocks and sands as well as on the north star. Ill goes the boat without oars. From the boat we go to the ship. Don't judge the ship from the land. The freshest and sweetest fish comes from the saltiest sea. No one can complain of the sea who has been twice shipwrecked. He gets his passage for nothing and winks at the captain's wife. The sea isn't burning. He that is embarked with the devil must sail with him.

A Sluggard's Poem.

The following winter poem was found hid under the pillow of one of our city slumberers, and expressed his feelings fully. Our reporter surreptitiously stole the lines and here they are in point: "The lark came up to meet the sun and carol forth its lay; the farmer's son took down his gun and at him blazed away. The busy bee arose at five and hummed the meadows o'er; the farmer's wife went for the hive and robbed him of his store. The little ant arose early too, his labors to begin; the greedy sparrow that way flew, and took his antship in O! birds and ants and bees be wise, in proverbs take no stock; let me refuse from bed to rise till half past eight o'clock.—Baker City Reville.

The Ideal vs. the Real.

The holiday season has come and gone, and the hungry, bustling world has settled down again to the stern realities of life; and millions of costly, but useless presents have been laid upon the shelf to gather dust and rest among the partly forgotten memories of the past. The thought, however, that prompted them, and the joy with which they were received, can never pass away or be dust encumbered. In this respect the ideal will outlive the real and be as lasting as life itself.—Prineville News.

The English tongue has been growing and changing for 1500 years and is growing and changing still; and the alterations are so vast and varied that if the English people of to-day could be brought face to face with their ancestors of John Lackland's time, they would no more understand one another's jabber than either would understand the speech of the barbarians of equatorial Africa.

The question has been asked, "In what respect are St. Patrick's Pills better than any other?" Try them, you will find that they produce a pleasanter cathartic effect, and more certain in their action, and that they not only physic but cleanse the whole system and regulate the liver and bowels. It is a hopeful and healthful sign of the present age that men and women of all classes are giving serious thought to the great social evils that deface our civilization. Poverty, wretchedness and unremunerative toil touch elbows with luxury and undesired wealth, and he must be a poor observer that does not reflect upon social misery and its causes.

Stored away in one of the rooms at the capitol in Montpelier, Vt., are the remains of the first printing press brought to this country. On it was printed the Freeman's Oath for Mass, the first thing printed in North America.

"The groom is a promising young man," says an exchange. Most grooms are just that.

THE DALLES.

The Gate City of the Inland Empire is situated at the head of navigation on the Middle Columbia, and is a thriving, prosperous city.

ITS TERRITORY.

It is the supply city for an extensive and rich agricultural and grazing country, its trade reaching as far south as Summer Lake, a distance of over two hundred miles.

THE LARGEST WOOL MARKET.

The rich grazing country along the eastern slope of the the Cascades furnishes pasture for thousands of sheep, the wool from which finds market here.

The Dalles is the largest original wool shipping point in America, about 5,000,000 pounds being shipped this year.

THE VINEYARD OF OREGON.

The country near The Dalles produces splendid crops of cereals, and its fruits cannot be excelled. It is the vineyard of Oregon, its grapes equalling California's best, and its other fruits, apples, pears, prunes, cherries etc., are unsurpassed.

ITS PRODUCTS.

The salmon fisheries are the finest on the Columbia, yielding this year a revenue of $1,500,000 which can and will be more than doubled in the near future.

The products of the beautiful Klickital valley find market here, and the country south and east has this year filled the warehouses, and all available storage places to overflowing with their products.

ITS WEALTH

It is the richest city of its size on the coast, and its money is scattered over and is being used to develop more farming country than is tributary to any other city in Eastern Oregon.

Its situation is unsurpassed! Its climate delightful! Its possibilities incalculable! Its resources unlimited! And on these corner stones she stands.
