Sensible Remarks of the Portland Even ing Telegram.

The Telegram of Portland makes some remarks in regard to the evening newspaper field which will apply to The Dalles as well as Portland and we reproduce the article.

This is a newspaper age in which com-petition is so vigorous that the principle of the survival of the fittest controls the field. Only a few years have passed since the evening paper held a subordinate position in the newspaper world. Today the situation is entirely changed. In every large city of the east and central west the evening papers are equal-ing their morning contempories in local sales, and in many instances surpassing them in both city and country circula-tion, As mediums for all kinds of advertising they are eagerly employed by The Pacific coast in general, and Portiand in particular, offer even greater op-portunities for the development of evening newspapers than the east. New York city is the leading news centre of the continent, and the time of day there is three hours ahead of Portland's time. Practically, the vital news in commer-cial, industrial, financial and congressional circles is on record by 7 p. m., which is received here at 4 p. m., in time for publication. In this way the Telegram will give to its readers all the news of the immediate day without compelling them to wait until the following morning. The subscribers in every section of the state will be accommodated, as the trains to the south, east and north, and the boats to the west all leave to the south of the state will be accommodated. in the evening after the paper is issued.

The province, however, of the evening newspaper being mainly local and published at a time when people are at liberty and glad to read a bright, ener-getic sheet that informs them of the do-ings and plans of their fellow-citizens, the Telegram will make a telling effort to cover the field in such a manner as to Petty Shoplifters.

Shopping seems to be as brisk this year as it was last. The large shops up town have been crowded almost every day in the past week, and the extent of the buying does not suggest any unusual scarcity of money. Most of the great emporiums find it necessary in the holiday season to double and sometimes treble their detective forces. "It is amin an extensive establishment in Twenty-third street. "We know nearly all of yield to the temptation to pick up little things that happen to please their fancy. "They see lots of pretty articles scattered about loosely and apparently unwatched, and almost unconsciously they commit petty thefts. Such women, I presume, do not realize that they are stealing, and there are instances constantly occurring where their consciences compel them to return the pilfered articles anonymously. Arrests, did you say? No: we seldom cause an arrest to be made. It is the policy of our firm to avoid scenes and scandals. When we detect any person in the act of stealing, a quiet word is generally all that is necessary to secure the return of the stolen article, and an 'amateur shoplifter' is not likely to repeat the offense after having once been found out."-New York Times.

The Ailments of Royalty.

Of late there have been some sinister rumors concerning the health of the Starbuck, tem. 28 deg., snowing and Prince of Wales' eldest son, and every one knows how strongly insanity pre-vails in the house of Brunswick. The other day the czar's uncle went raving mad at the autumn maneuvers, and the czar himself is suffering from some mysterious nervous complaint. Eighty-six and Walked Fifteen Miles. Col. John Clark, of this city, is a remarkably hale and vigorous man for one of his age, 86 years, as every one remarks who witnesses his erect form and firm step as he passes along the street. He recently walked around the cape, a distance of fifteen miles, in a trifle over six hours.-Gloucester (Mass.) Times.

An interview with a citizen of Ridgway, Elk county, develops some facts of interest concerning the tanning in-dustry. Ridgway is the centre of the hemlock bark industry of northern Pennsylvania. "The hemlock industry of the state," said he, "is about 75 by 150 miles in extent, and the tanneries located in that district have extra facilities for securing bark. The cost of hemlock bark at Ridgway is about $5 per cord. The tanneries located at that point consume about 40,000 cords a year. Large quantities of their products find ready markets in Europe." Said one of the leading tan-

"The cost of bark transportation has become of late years a very important element in the success of the tanning industry. Bark is bulky and cost of transportation long distances adds very materially to the cost of leather. Pennsylvania has advantages over New England tanning centers by reason of its nearness to West Virginia bark regions. Tanneries located in the very midst of the bark districts have, of course, special advantages which count in these days of close margins. We have reached a time when all opportunities for reducing cost must be watched, and the manufacturer who fails to do so is apt to be left."—Shoe and Leather Facts.

They Don't Live in Tenement Houses. She

As soon as the children learn to speak English they pick up American ideas, and before long a certain amount of pride manifests itself. A curious indication of this is that none of the English speaking young people will admit that they live in tenement houses. If you ask them they will always tell you that their home is in a flat house, while a few have reached a pitch of refinement where the dingy old buildings become apartment

If you went into some of the homes, through the dark halls and up four or five flights of rickety stairs, you might ask yourself what a tenement house really is. The young persons there, how-ever, will tell you that the Hebrews in Essex and Ludlow streets live in tenement houses. This pride may be false but it is akin to ambition, and will make good American men and women of the grandchildren of the immigrants.-New York Tribune.

About Vegetables.

Vegetables of all available kinds should always be found upon our tables, as they have a direct chemical and remedial action upon our bodies. Onions and asparagus are particularly recom-mended for rheumatism and rheumatic gout; cauliflower has a tonic effect upon the system, and boiled peas contain 93 per cent. of nutriment, which is almost equal to the value of wheat bread. Potatoes are certainly a very desirable part of our meals, and lettuces, carrots and cabbages would be much easier digested but for the artificial methods of cooking and seasoning which are employed by the modern civilized cook.

Vegetables should never be put into the cellar, as many of them contain acids which will absorb the poison of the ground air, and, if eaten, will prove very unhealthy, and if allowed to remain will rapidly decompose and fill the air which arises to the upper rooms with a poison that will undoubtedly cause much mischief. Potatoes should not be exposed to the sun, but kept in some dry place where the light and air can always strike them.-Hall's Journal.

Safety on Railroad Trains.

Some time ago railroad men engaged in a discussion through the newspapers about the safest position for a traveler to assume when on a train, and it seemed to be agreed finally that the person who took a seat on the right hand side of the N. HARRIS. middle car of the train, in a seat as near the middle as possible, would have a better chance of escaping injury in an accident than one who sat somewhere else.

"I never was satisfied that there was anything in that theory," says A. D. Martin, a St. Louis traveling man, "but it is astonishing to notice how many people believe in it. You see the effects of the publication everywhere you go on a railway train. People crowd the middle car of a train, and get on the right hand and as near the middle of the car Mountain the seats on the right hand side of the car crowded, although it was sunny there, while the seats on the other side were nearly empty."-St. Louis

Treatment of Factory Hands.

Superintendents of factories would do well to regard attentively the regime which exists in a wool spinning mill in Norway. All the unmarried hands, both male and famale, are engaged for a fixed yearly salary, and get board and lodging at the works. There is a large kitchen and a large dining room, where the employer and employed dine together. The owner's wife herself superintends the cooking. The bedrooms and the other apartments are roomy and well ventilated; the women sleep in one end of the building and the men in the other. They all look healthy and fresh, and very un like ordinary factory hands.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Small Navies.

Greece and Portugal, having special reasons for strengthening their forces, have each laid down ambitious naval programmes. Denmark, Norway and Sweden and Holland are doing a little in the way of building. In South America, the Argentin Republic, having expansive ideas of her future, has planned for considerable additions to her fleet. Whether the monetary disturbances will cause their relinquishment is not yet known. Brazil is a good second, Chili a better third, and the remainder of our American sister republics are out of the race.-New York Herald.
