ANTI-PARNELLITES GLOOMY.

The Success of the "Uncrowned King" Seems Inevitable.

LONDON, March 3.-The inevitable triumph of Parnell is causing much searching of heart mong the liberals. It is beginning to be darkly whispered that Gladstone's action was hasty and his letter imprudent, and, in fact, if the city was J. Wilkes Booth. His resemverdict in the divorce suit it would leave the member for Cork alone. The suggestion that home rule be dropped is regarded as impossible. Its effect would be to drive the Irish vote in England over to the conservatives and make the liberals certain of losing the next general election. It is not surprising that in the circumstances suggestions are already affoat that terms must after all be made with Parnell. If Gladstone becomes convinced that Parnell is going to carry the Irish people with him he will discover some means of reforming an alliance with the gentlemen whom two state is commencing to melt. months ago he ordered about his business. Anti-Parnellites are becoming reint-hearted. They are finding out that Ireland is going with Parnell and something like a panic reigns in the party. With one exception all the gentlemen

Early Chickens. Early hatching is necessary to success in the poultry yard. Now, as warmth is a requisite for rearing early chickens, provident poultry keepers have made provisions for securing the same. The hens are provided with dry houses, well sheltered from east winds, in which to set, and are punctually fed and watered. The chicks may be saved by farmers and ordinary poultry keepers who do not use incubators by the use of artificial brooders. These latter, unlike the incubators, may be employed by any one who exercises average common sense in their management. The newly hatched chicks are taken from the nest as soon as out of the shells and placed in the brooder. where they are kept until the brood is all out. The hen and chicks are then placed in a warm glazed coop, and there kept until strong enough to look out for themselves. The principal conditions necessary to success in brooders are plenty of fresh air and sufficient heat to prevent the chicks from crowding. Some brooders are warmed by tanks or pipes of hot by a coil of pipe in a stove. A well sustained heat of about 80 degs, is essential for the first week, as a chill is fatal. After that time the temperature may be lowered to about 70 degs. In severe weather it is necessary to keep the chickens within doors until about three weeks old. In ordinary weather they may be allowed a run fenced in with small mesh wire netting and connecting with a warm, dry and well protected coop. Chickens hatched out of season ought to be fed with great punctuality. Corne should also be given to them very early

How to Subdue Weeds. One important point in keeping a farm clear from weeds is to see that these germs are not imported in purchased seeds. Weeds are often introduced by the farmer's own animals. Horses that have been fed at the town stables, and cattle that have been allowed to forage on the highways, may each be the means of bringing obnoxious weeds onto the farm. For the hoed crops clean cultivation is the antidote. Cut the weeds off at the surface of the ground at a time when they are at their best—that is, at the time of flowering and before the seed has grown sufficient to germanate. This is the best method of dealing with seeds where they have become a pest in mead-in the morning and very late in the day.

they will browse closely many varieties that cattle will not touch. Unless rich ground is closely covered with useful plants it is quite certain to produce weeds. Nothing surpasses clover for smothering weeds. If sown thickly, and stock is kept off from it after the mowing, so that some of the seed from the second crop will be scattered, it will gain complete possession of the field, to the exclusion of weeds.
