Indicates below 0. Maximum temperature, 46; minimum temperature, 22. Total precipitation from July 1st to date, 6.35; average precipitation from July 1st to date, 12.13; average deficiency from July 1st to date, 5.78.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES.

THE DALLES, March 12, 1891. FAIR. Weather forecast till 12 m., Friday; fair. Slightly warmer.

The Chronicle is the Only Paper in The Dalles that Receives the Associated Press Dispatches.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

S. J. LaFrance, of Hood River, is in the city.

H. H. Kiddell returned from Portland this morning.

C. E. Haight has returned from a trip to Shearer's Bridge.

Jack Nolin went out on the Wapinitia stage this morning to teach a term of school in district No. 48, on Juniper Flat.

Mrs. C. L. Phillips has received the larger part of her new millinery for the spring trade and has it now ready for inspection.

Miss Rosa Michell is quite ill from what is called la grippe. We will be pleased to hear of her immediate recovery.

We shall publish in tomorrow's issue, The Dalles Water bill, from a certified copy sent to the secretary of the water commission.

The subscription price of the weekly CHRONICLE is only a $1.50 a year, or 75 cents for six months. This makes it the cheapest paper of its class in Oregon.

We regret to hear that the wife of Senator Watkins is still suffering quite severely from an attack of erysipelas. She is not so well today as she was yesterday.

Mr. Frank Gabel, of Wapinitia, came into town yesterday to hire five or six men to help him in the lambing season. He reports about three inches of snow and that is rapidly disappearing.

Two car loads of sheep were shipped from the stock yards this morning by J. A. Anderson. They were bought in this county and are booked for the Union stock yards, Portland. The sheep are in prime condition.

Mr. H. C. Nielson is in receipt of his spring and summer clothing for gentlemen and boys. His selections are fine and the styles are the latest out, while his prices are extremely low. He carries a fine stock and will not be undersold.

J. L. Thompson is preparing the foundation for another new building on the old mint property, between the building now nearing completion, corner of Madison and Second, and the flouring mill.

The little word "its," the possessive case of the neuter pronoun "it," as much as it is used in all current literature, never occurs once in the Bible. It is comparatively a new word in our language and was not in use 250 years ago.

E. N. Chandler came in town last night to make preparations for opening of the new grange store. Mr. Chandler will soon be a full fledged citizen of The Dalles and to the manor born, as it were, and the CHRONICLE bids him a hearty welcome.

Professor Hagal has been busy all day, at the fair grounds, making preparations for his balloon ascension next Sunday at 2:30 o'clock. He has had to build a large temporary furnace in which to make the gas to inflate his big balloon, which is 70 feet high by 55 feet in diameter. He has put the charge for admission to the grounds, at twenty-five cents and promises to exhibit, rain or shine.

There have arrived in Portland a larger number of vessels than usual for this season, purposely to load with wheat for Europe, and we notice wheat has jumped up in price to $1.35 per cental for Eastern Oregon, which means 81 cents per bushel there. Buyers are only offering 58 cents in this city. At Walla Walla 200 miles further inland 63 cents is being paid. Why this difference in price we don't quite understand. It is not the railroad this time sure, as the rate is 10 1/2 cents a bushel from here to Portland.

Jack Hickey, an old timer of The Dalles, has just returned from the Argentine Republic. While there he was compelled to secure the necessities of life, by sheep-shearing at the munificent remuneration of a cent and a half a head, paid in currency based on mortgages on real estate, worth about forty cents on the dollar in gold. While so engaged they fed him on meat straight, without bread or anything else. He reports their methods of shearing to be very primitive. Little girls and boys of eight to twelve years of age hold the sheep while being clipped. He considers that country a good place to stay away from, and was glad to get back to God's country.

ATTENTION.

The subscribers to the stock of The Dalles, Portland and Astoria Steamboat Co. are requested to meet at the rooms of the Board of Trade this Thursday evening at 7:30 sharp, to consider matters of great importance.

The War of the Dalles.

The War of the Dalles. THE DALLES, March 9, 1891. Editor of The Sun: Please permit me, through the columns of your paper, to call attention to some notable facts connected with the war which has been going on between our respective dailies.

For the first time in the history of our great country have two foreign powers been known to engage in warfare over American productions. And what is still more surprising is to see a thoroughbred Englishman hoist the white flag at the first volley, (after having skirmished along the line for several days humming, "Go to him, I'll have the blood of an Irishman.") and leave the brave Irishman master of the situation, wedding his powerful sword, ready to purify Oregon politics, and if Her Majesty's government wishes to arbitrate the Behring sea troubles. He will settle them to the tune of "Johnny Come Running Home."

"History repeats," so Johnny beware. We're not of good editors many; So when you fight an Irishman brave, Remember the cats of Kilkenny.

WASN'T THAT KIND OF A FISH.

How a Gilded Salmon Fooled a Fish Hawk. Every one riding or walking through Upper Astoria has noticed Ben Young's handsome new house and the big gold salmon that does duty as a weather vane above the cupola. Yesterday a fish hawk was sweeping over that part of the peninsula, when his piercing eye caught sight of the royal chinook salmon glistening in the bright rays of the sun. He seemed to consider it a very strange thing that a salmon should hang suspended in mid air above the roof of a house. He flew several hundred feet higher in the still and sunny air, and sailed round and round in narrowing circles for several seconds, all the time with his keen gaze fixed on the fish.

Finally, however, he seemed to come to the conclusion that the fish was genuine, and swooping down he seized it with his talons. But the fastenings were strong, and though the fish spun round on its perch, it stayed. The hawk rose, circled twice more and made another swoop, scaring himself in his clatter against the resounding sides of the metal salmon, that spun as though in the vortex of a cyclone.

Then the disgusted hawk spread its wings and, with a gleam of discomfiture in its erstwhile proud eye, sailed away for the forest recesses of Astor addition, there to reflect on the deceptiveness of appearances.—Astorian.

Real Estate Transactions.

Hook River Townsite Co. to Miss Georgiana Smith, west half of lot lettered F, in Hood River; consideration, $87.90. Perry Howard to Nancy Capps, SW 1/4 of NE 1/4 and SE 1/4 of NW 1/4 and NW 1/4 of section 32, township 5, south of range 12 east, 160 acres except 6 acres; consideration, $200.

TWO TROTTLES.

WHAT HE SAID: This kiss upon your fan I press— Ah! Sainie N'houche, you don't refuse it! And may it from its soft recess— This kiss upon your fan I press— Be blown to you, a shy caress. By this white down, when'er you use it. This kiss upon your fan I press— Ah, Sainie N'houche, you don't refuse it!

Those Kilkenny Cats.

A gentleman of the Yankee persuasion requested the CHRONICLE man to explain the allusion to the "Kilkenny Cats," in the letter of "Subscriber," published in the Wasco Sun of yesterday and appearing in another place in this paper. His answer was as follows: "There were two cats in Kilkenny, And each thought there was an eat too many, So they gouged and they bit And they clawed and they fit Till excepting their tails And the tips of their tails Instead of two cats there warn't any."

Jerry Simpson's Repartee.

Washington Dispatch to New York Herald. "Is it true that you don't wear socks? Won't you let me see, please?" and a pretty woman, who thus addressed Jerry Simpson at the capitol today, glanced curiously at the latter's feet. "Madam," replied Simpson, gravely, "I'm a believer in reciprocity. Do you wear socks? If you'll show me yours, I'll show you mine."

Penoyer's Address to the People.

Ashland Tidings. Gentlemen in the backwoods! You must build your own wagon roads or wait till the state has more money [or another governor] before you get any help from Salem. The sum your representatives have agreed upon for your roads will just about complete the state capitol building, and I will put it there. The taxpayers of Orego need a dome too badly to waste their money on wagon roads.—Penoyer.

Praying and preying will go on as usual during the penitential season.

A Fair Flower Faded.

We regret very much indeed to hear of the death of little Ada Vanderpool, the only child of Mr. Willard Vanderpool, of Dufur, at the age of about five years. As report has reached us the child became sick about ten days ago with a complication of those two dread scourges of childhood, scarlet fever and diphtheria. It was supposed the crisis had passed last Sunday, and hopes were entertained of her complete recovery, but she took a relapse to which she succumbed this morning at 4 o'clock. The blow is an unusually hard one. The child was singularly bright and winsome and her death will throw a dark shadow over the hearts of the parents who loved her so well. We extend to them our deepest sympathy in their bitter sorrow.

Is Disease a Punishment.

The following advertisement, published by a prominent western patent medicine house would indicate that they regard disease as a punishment for sin: "Do you wish to know the quickest way to cure a severe cold? We will tell you. To cure a cold quickly, it must be treated before the cold has become settled in the system. This can always be done if you choose to, as nature in her kindness to man gives timely warning and plainly tells you in nature's way, that as a punishment for some indiscretion, you are to be afflicted with a cold unless you choose to ward it off by prompt action. The first symptoms of a cold, in most cases, is a dry, loud cough and sneezing. The cough is soon followed by a profuse watery expectation and the sneezing by a profuse watery discharge from the nose. In severe cases there is a thin white coating on the tongue. What to do? It is only necessary to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in double doses every hour. That will greatly lessen the severity of the cold and in most cases will effectually counteract it, and cure what would have been a severe cold within one or two days time. Try it and be convinced." 50 cent bottles for sale by Snipes & Kinersley, druggists.

Last Call—Last Chance.

Messrs. Livermore & Andrews the makers of the luxurious easy chairs at 77 Court street, hereby give notice that they will close out their business on April 1st. Parties wanting chairs should give their orders in at once in order to have them made before we close out.

LIVERMORE & ANDREWS.

There is a rumor that some enterprising individual is going to start a bathing establishment in the East End of the town. The baths will be of the mud variety and the establishment will be located in the middle of Second street. Already abundance of mud has been secured, and two or three "patients" have tried its efficacy.

Billy Darragh of this city was again arrested last night charged with selling whiskey to Indians. This is his third offense and he has already served two years in the penitentiary for a similar crime.

They Must Be Sold.

Another mark down on carpets. Now 55, 45 and 30 cents, 25 cents per yard less than San Francisco prices at J. C. BALDWIN'S.

A Modern Steam Dairy.

Julius Kaupisch has recently rented, for a term of years, 4,200 acres of the celebrated Novato ranch, 25 miles north of San Francisco, and is fitting it up with the best modern steam machinery, as a butter dairy.

Mr. Kaupisch is a Saxon by birth, and the son of one of the wealthiest and most extensive dairymen of central Europe, whose immense steam dairy had a world wide reputation as the model establishment of its kind. The elder Kaupisch prided himself on being right up to the times in all points. Every new invention thought to be of any value in dairying was procured and given a thorough trial. In this great model dairy was made every known product of cow's milk. Steam was made to perform every office possible. The cows were pumped dry of their milk, their stalls cleaned and the manure dumped into carts, feed cut, grain ground, roots pulped, churns rotated, cheeses pressed, water pumped, utensils cleaned, and even the stalls scalded out and the stables warmed by steam. Even with all this experimentation in a country where manual labor is cheap, Kaupisch persevered in his dairy.

He died only a few months ago, a wealthy man. In this dairy the scene, passed his boyhood and became entirely familiar with all milk products to the minutest details. He subsequently spent years of technical study in the government dairy station of his native country. After serving for some years in different dairies in Saxony and Holland, and visiting all the great dairy sections of Europe, he came to the United States to introduce dairy machinery. He eventually brought up at Elgin, the great dairy centre of Illinois, and secured the position of superintendent of the great milk condensing and canning establishment there. He came to this coast last summer on a vacation; fell in love with the country as a general dairy section, and at once secured a favorable lease of a large ranch, and has fitted up one of the old fashioned hand work dairies into a modern steam dairy. The plant is run by a 15-horse power boiler and a 12-horse power engine, a cream separator and two immense churns. The cream separator is run by a little rotary power steam motor about as big as your two fists. Mr. Kaupisch has to return to Europe soon to settle up his father's estate, which will somewhat delay his ultimate plans. He intends, however, in due time, to put in plants to manufacture every known product from cow's milk, that he thinks will pay on this coast. The dairy is now milking 405 cows, and should carry, old style, about 800, and by modern style, when properly fitted up, 1,200 to 1,400 cows.

If he were a millionaire he would be at the helm of a dairy. If he had not a cent he would hire out to a dairyman until he had earned money enough to start one. Asked if steam would pay if put in a small dairy of 30 to 40 cows, he was most emphatic in saying it would, for many reasons; and for the one great point, cleanliness, thereby insuring far better results. Every dairymen should get a boiler and an engine at once. It is cheaper, and better than hand, horse or other power in the dairy.

Remedies for Pea Weevil.

This beetle deposits its eggs on young pea pods, and when the yellowish worm is hatched it bores through the pod into a pea, and there remains, feeding until it changes to a beetle about one-fourth of an inch long, grayish, mottled with black. Generally the beetle remains in the pea until it is planted. Neither the worm nor the beetle injures the germ, and infested peas are nearly, if not quite as sure to grow as those not touched. Use care in selecting seed. A patch on a pea a little darker than the rest of the surface indicates that the insect is inside. Put infested seeds, before planting, in an air-tight jar, say a quart fruit jar, into which two teaspoonfuls of bisulphide of carbon has been poured, cover and let it stand a day or two, being careful not to use the compound near fire or lights as it is easily ignited and is disastrously explosive. This will kill all the beetles and the seed will not be injured. A second remedy is to soak peas in boiling water for two minutes before planting. Another way is for all the farmers in one neighborhood to omit planting peas for one year, and keep the infested seed in perfectly air-tight vessels until the following year. This kills all the weevils, but the first remedy is more practical.

A closely allied weevil, the bean weevil, is found in beans. The same cautions and remedies apply to it as to the pea weevil.—Prof. Washburne, Oregon state entomologist.

Nothing but Leaves.

Keep in mind constantly the one fact in horticulture, that the leaves of the tree, its foliage, does all the important work, as nothing but the leaves can cause to grow fruit, wood, bark and roots. It is the office of the leaves to elaborate material with which every part of the whole structure is composed. They are the mouths, lungs and the stomach of the tree, all combined in one. The roots furnish the raw material and anchor the tree in its place. A great many so called authorities are constantly trying to grow fruit without the help of leaves, at least they seem to think them useless appendages, leaving them no room to grow. They succeed very poorly.

Eastern Fruit Prospects.

This coast has about as deep an interest in the Eastern fruit crop as we have in our own, for a big crop there means a light demand for our shipments of green fruits. The prospects of a great fruit crop east of the Rockies has never been better than at present. The great fruit regions of Western New York and Michigan report everything, so far, very promising. In Delaware and Maryland the peach trees, after their rest of last season, are looking strong and fine, therefore this coast should be prepared to dry and can extensively. Good dried fruit always sells.
