The Chronicle is the Only Paper in The Dalles that Receives the Associated Press Dispatches.

The only sensible way to build up a city, community or state, is to patronize the enterprises in our midst. There are many people who imagine it is good taste to send abroad for every thing they eat, wear or use in their houses, and if this line of action were carried out by our business men generally, it would lead to disastrous results. Our stores would close their doors and be obliged to seek other fields for business. The only way for the people to prosper is to encourage and assist in building up the important industries. It is often necessary to pay a little more, but the money is kept at home and circulated among our people. Citizens often complain of hard times when they have no one to blame but themselves. Stand together, work together and prosper together and we shall never hear or know of hard times.

The recent census of Germany shows the empire has a population of about 49,420,800; in December, 1871, the population of the new empire was 41,068,792. The increase of 2,565,000 in the first five years was the greatest ever known in an equal period of time. A remarkable fact disclosed by the census is the marked increase in the population of cities. The gain of Berlin is about 10 per cent of the entire increase in the empire and the ten largest cities claim one-half of the total growth. It is calculated that while the population of Germany shows an increase of 4,200,000 for the past ten years, Austro-Hungary has gained less than 3,000,000, France scarcely a million, judging from official estimates, Italy 2,750,000, the British Isles about 3,600,000 and Russia about 12,000,000.

Results are already beginning to appear from the postal subsidy bill. The Inman steamship company have been induced by it to undertake the construction of two new ocean greyhounds, equal to the very finest yessels afloat. They will be built in this country and will fly the American flag. The estimated cost is $4,000,000 for the two, each to be of 10,500 tons register. These millions of dollars will, therefore, be spent to give employment to American labor, and to circulate among American tradesmen, instead of going abroad. Even a little protection to shipping works very well.

In the old times ice was brought from the mountains and stored away in pits dug in the earth and covered with straw or other substances that proved non-conductors of heat and also protected it from the air. Mention of this fact is made in the Proverbs of Solomon, and it is frequently alluded to in the writings of the ancient Greeks and Romans. It is still in vogue in Italy, where snow gathered in the Apennines is brought by peasants to the principal cities and stored in cellars made especially for that purpose.

The new boat, the Norma, which is to ply on the Snake river, has been completed, and will commence running as soon as a sufficient stage of water is had. It is quite likely that neither the Columbia nor Snake rivers will rise to a great height this summer, as the snow is generally sinking into the ground as fast as it melts, and the mountain streams are carrying off very little surplus water.

Kearney, Neb., has an incorporated World's Fair Excursion & Investment company, with capital stock of $100,000. It invites persons to pay to it $52 in installments of 50 cents a week, and agrees for that sum to take them to and from the world's fair in special trains, pay for their meals en route, and their living expenses for a week in Chicago at the best $3 per day hotel and furnish them with tickets of admission, guides and printed information.

A modern Fagin has been unearthed at Buffalo, N. Y. He has nine children, all of whom of suitable age, he and his wife had trained in pocket-picking. Seventy-one pocket-books were found in his house. The exposure grew out of the arrest of two of his girls, who were detected in picking pockets at a museum, and who have been sent to a reformatory. The worthy couple will probably be retired to Auburn Prison.

The devil doesn't care how solemn a man looks if he forgets his religion when trading horses.

The White House dogs are no unimportant party of its life below stairs, observes the Washington Star. The pet dog of the establishment, and looked upon by both the president and Mrs. Harrison as a valued friend, is the Scotch collie, Dash. Dash is a fighter, not because he likes it, particularly, but just on general principles. He came with the family from Indianapolis, and his high-tempered proceedings there have not deserted him. On the contrary, he depends upon his ability to chew up any other animal who foolishly risks his fur within his reach. In Indianapolis, and here for a time, Dash took a great deal of pleasure in following the family carriage down town, or anywhere else it happened to be going. Especially when the ladies emerged from their shopping they would usually find Dash in the middle of a conflict with some other rash animal. The scene of the fight was under the carriage, which territory Dash felt proud to protect from all intruders. These little inconsistencies made him rather an unwise companion, and now the special province of Dash is to keep the White House grounds free from unsafe intruders. Jack, a fox-terrier, and Rab, a St. Bernard pup, are other members of the White House canine family. Mrs. Russell Harrison owns Rab.

James A. Bailey, the managing partner of the Barnum & Bailey show, is a native of Detroit and forty-four years of age. His first experience in the show business was as a paste boiler in the bill posting department of Robinson & Lake's circus, before the war.

Today (May day) promises to be a memorable one over all Europe. Judging from the preparations of the police and troops continental royalty views the situation with a feeling of uneasiness.

Baby is sick.—The woeful expression of a Des Moines teamster's countenance showed his deep anxiety was not entirely without cause, when he inquired of a druggist of the same city what was best to give a baby for a cold? It was not necessary for him to say more, his countenance showed that the pet of the family, if not the idol of his life was in distress. "We give our baby Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," was the druggist's answer. "I don't like to give the baby such strong medicine," said the teamster. You know John Oleson, of the Watters-Talbot Printing Co., don't you? inquired the druggist. "His baby, when eighteen months old, got hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and drank the whole of it. Of course it made the baby vomit very freely but did not injure it in the least, and what is more, it cured the baby's cold. The teamster already knew the value of the Remedy, having used it himself, and was now satisfied that there was no danger in giving it even to a baby. For sale by Snipes & Kinersly.

What is repentance? asks a contemporary. As a rule, repentance is being sorry when it is too late to do any good.

The following statement from Mr. W. B. Denny, a well known dairyman of New Lexington, Ohio, will be of interest to persons troubled with Rheumatism. He says: "I have used Chamberlain's Pain Balm for nearly two years, four bottles in all, and there is nothing I have ever used that gave me as much relief from rheumatism. I always keep a bottle of it in the house." For sale by Snipes & Kinersly.

Taught a Lesson.

A man with large business interests and a handsome income married a lady who, accustomed all her previous life to the luxuries of wealth, had never formed any clear conception of the worth and purchasing power of money. For some months the indulgent husband gratified his wife's every whim.

One day the lady, to carry out some caprice, asked for a check for so large a sum that the gentleman was disturbed. He saw that such prodigality, if persisted in, meant ruin; but not wishing to grieve his wife by a downright refusal he determined to give her a lesson in finance. He therefore smilingly remarked that he could not give her a check as usual, but would send up the money from his store.

About noon the promised money came, not in crisp bills, as was expected, but in silver dollars, the sum total filling several specie bags.

The wife was first vexed, then amused, and finally, as the afternoon wore away, became deeply thoughtful. When her husband came home to supper she took him gently by the arm, and leading him into the room where the ponderous bags of specie were still standing, said:

"My dear, is this the money I asked you for this morning?"

"It is, my love," was the reply.

"And did you have to take this money all in dollar by dollar, in the course of your business?" was the next question.

"Yes," he answered, gently, "it represents the earnings of many weeks of hard labor."

"Well, then," she said, with tearful eyes, "send a man to take it back to the bank in the morning. I can't use so much money for so trivial a purpose. I didn't understand about it before."

"Youth's Companion."

A Blind Man's Intelligent Dog.

Every one who walks along upper Broadway knows the blind newsman and his dog at the corner of Thirtieth street. The man sits on a camp stool from noon until 8 o'clock every day selling papers, and during that time the dog is his constant companion.

The other evening, when the man had sold all his papers and was ready to go home, he got up, folded his camp stool and tucked it under his arm, and catching a tight hold of the string attached to the dog's collar, started to walk up Broadway. When they reached the middle of the next block the dog stopped.

"Come along; get up, Prince," said the blind man, tugging at the string. But the dog seemingly paid no attention. He was looking intently down the street at the approaching horse-car. He stood this way for some minutes, scanning each car carefully as it passed, and suddenly ran out into the street, the man following, and jumped aboard the front platform of an up town green car. The car stopped and the blind man groped his way inside and took a seat, while the dog remained on the platform.

The same performance is repeated every night, and it is said that the man and his dog are known to all the drivers and conductors on the line.—New York Evening Sun.

Helplessness of the "Crackers."

One clever, original manufacturer for five years devoted head, heart and purse to ameliorate the condition of his operatives—the worst class in the community. They had no homes; he bought and built houses, which fell to pieces through neglect or were burned up in orgies. When their dwellings were again repaired the crackers felt out of place in a setting of order and neatness, and "jes to make things sarter homelike," as was afterward naively explained, they kicked out the panels of the doors, smashed the windows, riddled the walls and cut up the floors for kindling wood.

With driftwood for fuel lying almost at their gates, if they have a gate, rather than walk to and from the fence, if they have a fence, the proletarians, inhabitants of a tenement, destroy their landlord's property. An attempt to utilize their horticultural instincts was unavailing. The gardens were fenced, the tenants buried the plants; the plants were plowed, not a seed was planted, and when, undiscouraged, the employer planted the gardens himself, the people turned in the hogs with the comment, "Bacon's better than garden sass any day."—Century.

A Hymn with Two Authors.

Who is the author of the hymn, "In the Sweet By and By?" With regard to the authorship of this now famous hymn there is a difference of opinion. The author of the words is believed to be Dr. S. F. Bennett, who, while living in Elkhorst, Wis., wrote the lines in a fit of mental depression. They were set to music by Mr. J. P. Webster, a composer living in the same town. Another version credits Mr. Webster with the authorship of the music and the first verse of the hymn, which was then completed by Dr. Bennett. The credit of both words and music must be given to the two gentlemen mentioned, though what was the individual contribution of each cannot now be determined. The song was written in 1888, and almost immediately achieved the wide popularity which it has ever since enjoyed.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Heard Clear of Sin.

Milkman—Johnny, did you put water in the milk this morning?
New Assistant—Yes, sir.
"Don't you know that is wicked, Johnny?"
"But you told me to mix water with the milk."
"Yes, but I told you to put the water in first and pour the milk into it. Then, you see, we can tell the people we never put water in our milk."—Texas Siftings.

He Ran First.

The depositors in a private institution in a Kansas town were getting ready to make a run, as the banker was reported short, but before they could do so he left by way of the back door, and took all the cash in his carpet-bag. He reasoned that in his case it was better to run than be run on.—Detroit Free Press.
