HARRISON IN WEBFOOT

He Sleeps Past Wide-Awake Eugene but Wakes Up at Albany--Receptions Being Held in the Rain.

More Forest Fires--A Doctor Doing a Killing Business--The Influenza in England.

PORTLAND, May 5.—The early part of the journey of the president and party into Oregon today was made in a steady fall of rain varying from a drizzle to a light storm. This discouraging state of affairs did not seem to dampen the enthusiasm of the inhabitants and they paid the chief magistrate every possible honor at each place visited.

A Reception that Flashed in the Pan.

Large crowds, including Grand Army men and militia, were assembled at Eugene to greet the president but all their preparations went for naught as he was fast asleep in his car when the train drew up at that station nor was he awakened by the firing of cannon and the familiar strains of "Hail to our Chief" by the brass band. It was 6 o'clock in the morning but the people thought the president should have acknowledged the compliment paid him and they gave free vent to their indignation at his failure to appear.

It is explained by the president's friends that the people of Eugene had been informed last night that the president's engagement for the day, made it absolutely necessary that he should have a full night's rest and that it would be asking too much to expect him to begin the labor of the day at 5 o'clock in the morning. This, however, was the only disappointment of today.

Reception at Albany.

At Albany which was reached at 8 o'clock, the president and all members of his party were on the rear platform of the observation car and gave a hearty response to the enthusiastic greeting of the people.

Cadets of the Corvallis agricultural college were drawn up in line at the station and formed a part of the reception committee. There was a fine display of flags and profusion of floral tributes. The mayor of the city introduced the president to the throng. He acknowledged their cheers with a brief address.

THE GOVERNOR WAS THERE.

A Handsome Address by Our Executive and an Equally Handsome Reply.

At Salem there was a slight delay owing to the absence of the governor. The mayor of the city procured a carriage and after a short absence returned in company with the governor. These two gentlemen were the first persons to board the presidential train.

They were received by marshal Randall and presented to the president and to the members of the party including Mrs. Harrison and other ladies. On being presented to the president governor Penney said:

"I am glad to see you, Mr. President, and to welcome you to Oregon on behalf of the people of the state of Oregon; I do as its chief executive officer extend to you—the president of the United States—a most cordial welcome. The freedom of the whole state is yours. Upon this occasion all party differences are forgotten and the citizens of our state hail your presence here, as this thronged assemblage well attests, with sincere greetings, and even nature itself appears to be in full accord with the sentiment of our people, for in the valley and upon mountain spring has just now hung its leafy banners out as if to bid you welcome here.

"We were gratified when we learned of your intended visit and it has afforded to us unfeigned pleasure to hear of the hearty demonstrations that have been accorded you in all portions of our common country which you have visited. We sincerely regret that you could not have prolonged your stay within our borders in order to visit other portions of our state not embraced in your itinerary, assuring you that you would have received in all localities from the mountains to the sea, most hospitable greetings of our yeomanry.

"Mr. President, the people of this commonwealth congratulate you upon the feeling of national amity everywhere manifested upon your journey and it is their earnest prayer that the spirit of concord now happily existing among the people of our whole country may remain undisturbed throughout the remainder of your administration and for unnumbered cycles yet to come. Again I assure you that Oregon extends to you a generous, heartfelt welcome."

The president responded as follows:

"Governor Penney, Mr. Mayor and Fellow Citizens: It is very pleasant to be assured by these kindly words, which have been spoken by the governor of this state and by the chief officer of this municipality, that we are welcome to the state of Oregon and to the city of Salem. I find here, as I have found elsewhere, that these cordial words of welcome are repeated with increased emphasis by the kindly faces of those who have assembled to greet us. I am glad that here as elsewhere, we look into the faces of happy, prosperous, contented, liberty-loving patriotic American citizens. (Applause.) The wholesome and just division of power between three great independent, co-ordinate branches of government, the executive, legislative and judicial, has already demonstrated that what seems to the nations of Europe to be a complicated and jangling system, produces in fact the most perfect harmony, and most complete and satisfactory organization for social order and for national strength.

"We stand here today in one of those halls set apart to the law making body of your state. Those who have assembled here are chosen by your suffrage. They come here as representatives to enact into laws those views of the public questions which have met the sanction of a majority of your people, expressed in an orderly and honest way at the ballot box. I hope it may always be found to be true of Oregon that your legislative body is a representative body, that coming from the people its service is consecrated to the people.

"The duty of the executive is to administer its laws; the military power is lodged with him under constitutional limitations. He does not frame its statutes though in most states and under our national government a veto power is lodged in him with a view to secure a reconsideration of any particular measure. But a public executive officer has one plain duty, and it is to enforce the laws with kindness and forbearance, but with promptness and inexorable decision. (Cheers.)

"It is my great pleasure to find it generally everywhere a disposition to obey the law. I have but one message for the north and for the south, for the east and for the west, as I journey through this land, it is to hold up the law—(cries of 'good good' and cheers)—and to say everywhere that every man owes allegiance to it and that all law breakers must be left to the deliberate and safe judgment of an established tribunal. (Applause.)

"You are justly proud of your great state. Its capabilities are enormous; its adaptation to comfortable life are peculiar and fine. Years will bring you increased population and increased wealth. I hope they will bring with it, marching in this stately progress of material things, those of finer things, piety, pure homes and orderly communities. (Applause.) But above all this state, over all our rejoicings in the advantages which are about us in our respective states, we look with greater pride to that great arch of government that unites those states and makes of them one great union." (Cheers.)

At the Indian School. A short stop was made at Chemawa, where the president reviewed the pupils of the Indian training school and made an appropriate address to them.

At Oregon City. At Oregon City the party met with a hearty reception. The president made a pleasant address in reply to an address of welcome.

THE ARRIVAL IN PORTLAND.

Received with Great Pomp and Splendor. PORTLAND, Or., May 5.—At 12:10 the presidential train arrived at L street station, East Portland, with its locomotive gaily decked with evergreens, flowers, bunting and flags.

All the steamboats in the harbor blew whistles lustily and a salute of twenty-one guns was fired.

When the president came out of the car he was met by ex-United States Attorney General George H. Williams, who introduced him to the Mayor De Lashmunt. The presidential party then entered the carriage and crossed the Morrison street bridge into Portland escorted by the marine band, the Sheridan Cavalry company and the Grand Army of Republic.

As the procession moved across the bridge the booming of cannons and tooting of whistles continued.

Twenty thousand people were waiting at the Portland approach to the bridge and when the presidential carriage finally reached this side a mighty cheer went up from every throat.

The crowd immediately fell in behind the presidential carriage and cheered until hoarse. The president acknowledged the compliment by riding bareheaded through the streets and bowing right and left.

A slight rain was falling when the president reached Portland, but it soon turned into a heavy rain. However, it did not interfere with the formation of the parade. Over four thousand men were in line.

The line consisted of the entire garrison at Vancouver barracks, the First regiment O. N. G. cadets of the Bishop military academy, Grand Army, civic societies and firemen. Col. T. M. Anderson of Vancouver was marshal.

The line of march extended to the high school where about four thousand school children, were drawn up in line, which extended four blocks. The president bowed acknowledgements as he passed through the line.

After marching about the city for two hours the procession was reviewed by the president and dismissed. The presidential party then retired to the hotel.

THE NEW YORK STRIKERS.

The Situation Discussed in Saloons and on Street Corners.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Sunday in this city was not a day of rest for the strikers. The men met in saloons and on the corners and discussed the situation. They say they will not give in to the bosses. The central labor union held a meeting in Clarendon hall this afternoon and delegates from a great many trades unions were present. Resolutions were passed upholding the strikers. The boss framers also held a meeting and decided to advertise for 700 men. They laughed at the report that twenty-seven of their number had signed an agreement with the strikers. A general meeting of bosses will be held tomorrow night.

A LOVERS' MAD ACT.

The Result of His Fiances Exchanging Loving Caresses With Another.

VIENNA, May 3.—A coachman named Schilatulla, at Neustadt, near Vienna, suspected a laborer named Naproala of courting his fiancée, Fraulien Kopnitz. He played detective and discovered the pair a few evenings ago hiding in a forage house and exchanging loving caresses. Schilatulla quietly fastened the doors so that the couple could not get out. He then set fire to the building and the victims of his hate soon perished amid the flames. The people attracted to the spot found Schilatulla hanging dead from a rafter of an adjacent coach house, having committed suicide.
