HOOD RIVER.

The Hood River valley is essentially a fruit country. While this class of industry is practically in its infancy in that region, enough has been accomplished to prove its admirable adaptation, in climate and soil, to fruit raising. A careful estimate places the number of trees already set out at 50,000. They consist of apples, pears, plums, cherries, prunes, apricots and other rarer varieties. We saw several young persimmon trees that looked remarkably healthy but whether they will bear any fruit in this northern climate has not yet been proved. All these, with the exception of the last, where the trees were sufficiently matured are now covered with bud and blossom, and give assured promise of an immense yield. The quality of the fruit is not excelled any where. An apple and pear exhibit was made at our last district fair which was the admiration and wonder of all who saw it. Peter Mohr exhibited 18 plates of apples and took 16 premiums, 10 of them being first class. The same exhibit was afterwards taken to the Portland fair and was pronounced the best exhibit at the fair. A well-known California fruit puyer pronounced some white winter Pearmain "the largest he ever saw." Sixty-two of the same variety filled a box which weighed 45 pounds. No proper estimate can yet be made as to the profits of this special class of fruit, as fully three-fourths of the trees are yet in their infancy. It may be said however, that an average of ten dollars a tree is no uncommon thing where the trees are six years old or over. Some idea of the quality of the fruit may be gathered from the fact that in the exhibit already referred to was a Spitzbergen apple that weighed 12 ounces; a Swaar that weighed 14 ounces; a Blue Pearmain that weighed 16 ounces and a Twenty Ounce Pippin that weighed exactly 20 ounces. In the varieties of fruit already named Hood River will, during the coming season, beat all past record. The wealth of promise was facetiously told in the remark of Joe Wilson: "There is a prospect of a good crop of everything this year except politicians. It's an off year for them."

Affairs at Newfoundland are in a very bad state. All along the shore of Fortune Bay the fishing villages are reported to be in a starving condition. Their only means to subsistence appears to be the sale of bait of American and French fishing vessels and this traffic have been denied to the people by the action of the Newfoundland government. The result is that starvation and want has driven them to desperation and open resistance. Recently the government blockaded Fortune Bay with four armed vessels but the blockade was broken by 70 local fishermen who succeeded in escaping the cruisers and reaching St. Pierre where they sold their bait to French fishing vessels at $5 to $6 a barrel. If the government authorities arrest these men on their return, as it is said they intend to do, bloodshed is feared, as the men are desperate and do not intend to be deprived of their right to live without a struggle. Meanwhile the British government, unmindful of the peoples' need, is quietly forging a chain to bind them to their present condition. A bill known as the Knutsford coercion bill, whose object is to compel the Newfoundlanders to submit to the British programme, has passed to a second reading in the house of lords, without a division. England is simply an unreasonable bully when she comes to deal with a people of insignificant power. If Newfoundland was half her match she would not treat her in this manner for the world.

Oregon's Poor Economy.

The Argonaut.
Oregon is grandly rich in agricultural wealth; she is rich in mines of the precious metals and in minerals; her great forests of useful timber are figuratively inexhaustible; the noblest river of the continent courses through her territory; and the state owes no debt. With all of this transcendent affluence of possessions, and the incalculable grandeur to flow therefrom, with a full treasury and no indebtedness, the men whom her citizens chose to represent them in the legislature wretchedly failed of their duty in the nick of time, and virtually pushed shut the doors against Oregon's making an appearance at the world's fair, so far as their action could affect the matter. It is hardly too much to say that there is not a state of the union to which more benefit and greater profit can come through the agency of the fair. The world will be there to witness the magnificent spectacle of the choicest products and most attractive objects from every portion of the republic, from every nation of the globe. Oregon is in the adolescence of development. She can make a splendid showing. The action of her legislature would restrain her from making any exhibit. It was not so much an act of stupidity and folly as of mulish stubbornness and insensate idea of economy.

An Open River the Cry.

Portland must secure the opening of the great Columbia river or lose the business of the inland empire, or the greater part of it. She cannot afford to sit still in the Oregon style of years ago and allow her more modern and enterprising young sisters on the sound to gather to themselves this vast volume of business. She must be alert, and cast away that idea that she seems to hold dearest—that per cent. is the most important thing to be taken into consideration. In these latter days of business the man men who live from straight per cent. without effort or trouble on the part of themselves, are growing in disrepute, and are considered barnacles on the bottom of the ship of progress.

The Oregonian must awake to the importance of the occasion and blow its horn for once without "cash down," in order to save to Oregon the name of containing the largest city on the coast. If Portland loses the business of the inland empire, she will "not be in it." An open river to the sea is the only way of retaining it. It does not do for a man to overrate his resources and underrate his competitors, and neither can Portland afford it.—East Oregonian.

The Glory of a Woman.

"The glory of a woman is her hair," we are told; but that depends in some measure upon the way in which she wears it. If, as is the custom of some women, she brushes it back from her forehead, and then, after stretching the fibers to the tension of fiddle strings at concert pitch, belays the mass behind her ears, we must say that the appearance her head presents is anything but glorious. By what technical name this frightful arrangement is known we do not know, but it might appropriately enough be called the cemetery style.

Baby is sick.—The woeful expression of a Des Moines teamster's countenance showed his deep anxiety was not entirely without cause, when he inquired of a druggist of the same city what was best to give a baby for a cold? It was not necessary for him to say more, his countenance showed that the pet of the family, if not the idol of his life was in distress. "We give our baby Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," was the druggist's answer. "I don't like to give the baby such strong medicine," said the teamster. You know John Olsson, of the Watters-Talbot Printing Co., don't you? inquired the druggist. "His baby, when eighteen months old, got hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and drank the whole of it. Of course it made the baby vomit very freely but did not injure it in the least, and what is more, it cured the baby's cold. The teamster already knew the value of the Remedy, having used it himself, and was now satisfied that there was no danger in giving it even to a baby. For sale by Snipes & Kinersley.

A lady who is a lover of flowers, says that after wearing roses an entire evening she is enabled to bring them to life again by a hot-water bath. When she finds that from any cause whatever the blossoms droop and threaten an early death, she clips the stems, and, by letting the stalks rest for a while in steaming water, finds every leaf revive and freshen under the process.

Doctor's servant.—Now, I have sprinkled my master's coat thoroughly with carbolic water and dusted it with disinfecting powder, I am sure that nobody can fail to believe that he has a tremendous practice.

He wants it known.—Mr. J. H. Straub, a well known German citizen of Fort Madison, Iowa, was terribly afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism when Mr. J. F. Salmon, a prominent druggist there, advised him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One bottle of it cured him. His case was a very severe one. He suffered a great deal and now wants others similarly afflicted to know what cured him. 50 cent bottles for sale by Snipes & Kinersley.

Forfeited Railroad Lands

We are now ready to prepare papers for the filing and entry of Railroad Lands. We also attend to business before the U. S. Land Office and Secretary of the Interior.
