THE FOSSIL SURVEY.

Ir. Norton's Boute Does Not the Fossil People.

Fossil Journal. R. H. Norton and crew reached the coal mines last Friday with the preliminary survey from The Dalles. Mr. Norton was in town Saturday and appeared to be well pleased with the practicability of his route. The general route swings out southward from The Dalles, and takes in Dufur and the Cascade mountains, and then were through cade mountains, and then goes through Tygh valley and then down White river to the Deschutes; thence up Bake Oven creek to the confluence of Deep creek; thence up Deep creek and on the high divide, leaving the city of Antelope about five miles to the south; thence by Mail Sacks down Dry creek to the John Day below the mouth of Curran creek; thence up Dry Hollow to the mines. The distance is about 150 miles by the survey. It is about 75 miles on an air line from The Dalles to the mines. The preliminary survey crosses the John Day river nine times in the distance it travels up that stream area 15 miles. that stream—some 15 miles. From this finding of facts we would conclude that Mr. Norton's route is unnecessarily long and not very practicable. It leaves nearly all the resources that The Dalles wants far to the north of it, and The Dalles is bound to get the Dufur and Tygh valley trade without any railroad. What The Dalles ought to have is a road direct to the mines and tapping the best part of Sherman and Gilliam counties— the agricultural part. It would appear that the Norton route goes fifty miles out of the way in order to avoid all the country that it would pay The Dalles to build a road over.

Address of welcome was listened to with wrapt interest. The professor acknowledged in graceful language the kind words of welcome offered by the previous speaker, and then proceeded to sketch in a very interesting manner the workings of the State Agricultural college. This institute is supported by the state and its object is to instruct students scientifically and practically in the best methods of farming. The agricultural department is separate and cultural department is separate and distinct from the literary, and in this separation of the two branches Professor Letcher saw a great advantage. When the two are operated together the agricultural generally suffers, as the students of the other branch sneer at the farmer student and his work, thereby causing a WOULD LIKE TO SELL TO THE FAMILY feeling of prejudice—false prejudice—to who may occupy my late residence all the arise against the latter.
