A Journal reporter approached Gov-ernor Pennoyer today as to the progress made in building the state portage road at The Dalles of the Columbia. He found the governor still reluctant about newspaper interviewing but gathered a number of suggestions from a free talk with his excellency. Wool-has come in freely during the past week and has fairly got started in movement which will be brisk the following week. The clip exceeds expectations both in fleece and staple which averages nine pounds per fleece per head, an increase in weight over former years. One thing noticable, is the increased $1.25 per 100. oily state of the wool this season, which is owing to the thriving condition of the tions in freight rates from Oregon's little sheep during the entire wool year. Mr. B.
