possessed of an interesting relic of the past century in the form of a land lease given by Arthur, Earl of Donegall to John McArthur and signed on the fifth day of August, 1768, more than 122 mills baye been in correction. We want to the amount of money it puts in circulation, we may profitably consider the following report published by the secretary of the Albany Woolen Mills Company last week, at the close of the first year the mills baye been in correction. years ago. The document measures about two feet and a half by fourteen inches. The material is of parchment and is accompanied by a surveyor's plat. The seal is of red wax, but is broken and cracked so that outlines of what may cracked so that outlines of what may have been the Earl's coat of arms are not distinguishable. The signature, "Donegall," is in a bold, well-written hand, and is witnessed by David Mc-Cool and Geo. Cortis. On the back it is described as the "Lease of two Ballyboes of the Quarter Lands Carrowreagh."

What ballyboes may mean the writer knows not but the Coltic bally or bally not be signature, would it not make times better and money more plentiful? Suppose we had such an establishment in our own county, what effect would it have on the business of the County? in the first place it would afford a home market for a portion of one of the leading products of the county; it would furnish employment, at good wages, for from thirty to forty laborers, who not distinguishable. The signature,

The lands involved are said to contain by "admeasurement 323 acres and two roods plantation measure and the annual rent is 39 pounds sterling with ten shillings additional as "duties." The lands lie in the "parish of Templemore in the barony of Inishowen and county of Donegall. The indenture says that it "Hath demised, leased, set and to farm letten, and by these presents doth demise, lease, set and to farm let," etc. The earl reserves, among numerous other things. "Fishings, Fowlings, Free Warren and Chase" with liberty to "fish, fowl, hunt and hawk upon the same." The lease binds the lessee or his heirs to pay for and in lieu of "Herriot" the sum of twenty shillings on the death of John McArthur and "every Chief-Tenant dying in possession of the said demised premises." It also binds the lessee to pay an annual rent of forty shillings sterling for "every acre that shall be plowed or sown with corn or grain of any kind, within one year within the three last years before the expiration of said term, over and above one-three of the arable pasture of the premises." It also binds the lessee "to render suit and service at the Courts-Leet and Courts Baron, and to pay for every Head-Tenant of the Premises, Four-pence and for every Under-Tenant Two-pence sterling in the Name of Head-Money or Leet-Silver, at every Court-Leet to be held within the same." The lease further binds the renter to "grind all such Malt, Corn or other Grain as shall be expended on the premises (except such part thereof as shall be sown) or that he shall grind for sale at such mill or mills not exceeding two miles distant from its Place of Growth, as the said Earl, shall at any Time or Times, during the said Term by and Writings under his Hands appoint." And the renter further binds himself and his under-tenants each to build twenty perches annually of new fence "of a good single Earth Ditch, in straight lines, with a Grip or Trench on one Side, six feet wide at the Top, two feet wide at the Bottom and five feet deep below the off and disclosed the hiding place of a Surface," or in lieu of such to build "a number of valuable jewels."—New York good Stone wall or Ditch in straight lines four feet high in the Stone-Work, two feet thick at the Bottom and one foot thick at the top, capped with Sods, half a foot high above the Stones." Trees were to be planted, so many feet apart along the sod fences and in default a fine of two-pence for every tree not so planted was imposed. All of which goes to show that these old earls knew tolerably well how to take care of themselves and that human greed is at least as old as the eighteenth century.

Enterprises That Would Benefit all of

The wool clip of Eastern Oregon this year will be about 9,000,000 pounds. In all of this vast wool-growing region that produces such a vast amount of this staple article there is not a woolen mill or a scouring establishment. Nearly all this wool is shipped across the continent to be manufactured into cloth and reshipped to the Pacific coast to be bought and worn by those who produced it. The majority of this wool shrinks on an average 50 per cent by washing, so this year the wool growers of Eastern Oregen will pay freight across the continent on pay freight across the continent on 4,500,000 pounds of dirt that should be re-moved from the wool before it is shipped. The freight on the dirt alone would almost The freight on the dirt alone would almost pay for a scouring establishment with a capacity sufficient to scour all the wool raised in the Inland Empire. But better than establishments for scouring and grading the wool would be the building of mills to manufacture it into cloth, or at least enough of it to supply the woolen goods that are consumed on this coast. The saving of freight on the wool to the factories in the east and on the manufactured goods from the factories back to tured goods from the factories back to the producer and consumer would be no A RELIC OF OTHER DAYS.

Taken alto-gether the actual benefit to the county from the establishment of such an enter-prise would be nearly double the amount the mills would expend for material, labor, etc.

Cheap Funerals in New York. A Hester street undertaker says: "Funerals don't come very high in this neighborhood, but such as they are the poor people seem to have trouble paying the bills. I furnish what is considered a respectable funeral for $5.50, but that does not include any carriages. The coffin and the hearse attendance is all that I can give for the money. The people in this neighborhood are mostly Polish Jews and Greeks, who are nearly all very poor and $5.50 all very poor, and $5.50 represents a small fortune. Only a few of them, in my experience, have ever expressed any objection to having their dead buried in Potter's field, but they all are sensitive and superstitions about the funeral, and will sacrifice almost anything to obtain a coffin and hearse. "They seem to have no idea of the value of our money. A woman, whose husband died the other day, came to me with a brass ring, which she thought I would take in exchange for a coffin. She was very much surprised when I refused her, and offered to work for me for a year if I would only give her husband a decent funeral. He was finally buried the deck of a steamer or traveling at the expense of the city."-New York

As an illustration of one of Barmun's ingenious methods of attracting attention to his museum may be mentioned the incident of the "brick man." One day a man applied for alms to Barnun, who was sitting in the ticket office. To the inquiry as to why he did not go to work, the mandicant realist that he mandicant the mendicant replied that he would gladly do so at a dollar a day if he could find employment. Barunu gave, him twenty-five cents to get his breakfast, and told him to return, and he would give him a dollar and a half a day and easy work. When the man returned, Barnum gave him five bricks, and told him to place one in front of the museum, another on the corner of Vesey street, a third at the corner of Fulton-on the St. Paul's church side—and the fourth on the east corner of Fulton. Returning then to the museum, he was to take up the first brick and replace it with the fifth, and then continue his rounds, putting down one brick and taking up the other each time. He was enjoined to answer no ques-tions and to seem not to hear, and that at the end of each three-quarters of an hour he was to pass into the museum, look around at the curiosities for fifteen minutes and then resume his rounds with the bricks. Barnum says that the man played his part to perfection, and his eccentric conduct caused a great Many of these, of course, went into the museum to seek some explanation as to the purpose of the "brick man." was kept up for several days, until the police requested his withdrawal, because such crowds lingered about the museum that traffic was interrupted. -J. Importance of Breathing Properly. In all the various systems of physical culture now in vogue the greatest unportance is attached to taking the breath properly. The breathing should be slow and deep, six breaths a minute being a safe average. There is still a difference of opinion in regard to the relative value of abdominal and chest breathing, and each system has its advantages. One of the best exercises for increasing the capacity of the lungs is to draw a full breath very slowly and through the nose. Keep the lungs inflated as long as possible, and then expel the air suddenly through the mouth, and repeat the process.

too long at the start; the more gradually article is increasing every day. the power of doing this is attained the better will be the permanent results. There are many breathing exercises, and one of the best is the taking of a deep breath and swinging the arms, first one, then the other, and finally both, while the breath is inhaled. Excessive practice of any system should be avoided, and the golden rule of taking moderate and judicious exercise should be observed.—New York Commercial Adver-

An Outfit for Traveling.

A woman who has traveled a great deal abroad says: "A steamer trunk ought to hold all of one's baggage for a summer trip to Europe. In addition to a warm, loose flannel wrapper for cabin use and half a dozen changes of linen, all that is really required is a close fit-ting traveling suit of dark cloth or serge ting traveling suit of dark cloth or serge with toque to match sitting firmly on the head in case of a stiff breeze while upon the deck, while some prefer the less dressy worsted or velvet hood to protect the ears and throat; a short wrap of warm material, a long mackintesh to envelop the form during stormy weatharound in an open carriage upon land.

"With this necessary outfit and a light summer silk for the warmer days of sight seeing, one is well equipped for the longest journey, and may travel at ease free from the anxiety attendant upon the possession of the usual list of trunks carried by most novices while upon a journey."—Boston Transcript.

The Vanderbilt System and Its Managers More than 7,000 miles of railroad are absolutely controlled and operated by the Vanderbilt family. The roads which are advertised as the "Vanderbilt system" are the New York Central and Hudson River, the Michigan Central, the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis, the West Shore, and the New York, Chicago and St. Louis. These six roads with their leased lines and the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg, which has been purchased by the Van-derbilts, have 7,300 miles of line and represent a capital stock of more than $150,000,000. Their bonded indebtedness will aggregate nearly $300,000,000. These roads are under the absolute gontrol and personal direction of Cornelius Vanderbilt. As his principal aids in managing this property Cornelius Van-derbilt has surrounded himself with four brainy men. They are Chauncey M Depew, John Newell, Henry B. Led-yard and Melville E. Ingalls.—Chicago Herald.

A Daughter of a Duche The younger daughter of the Duke and se of Connaught was born on St. Patrick's Day, and rejoices in the name of Victoria Patricia, so called in honor of her grandma and that Irish saint. An American lady living in London, and who seems to know a good deal about English royalty, says the little girl is a real beauty, and that her cousins, of whom there is a troop, call her "Patsy!" Whether this will render the name pop-plar in aristocratic circles remains to be een, but Patricia in itself is a lovely mouthful and a decided improvement on Gladys and Gwendoline, which are as common as Edith and Mabel were ten years ago.-London Letter.
