METEOROLOGICAL REPORT.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES.

THE DALLES, June 9, 1891. FAIR Weather forecast till 12 m., Wednesday; fair. Warmer.

The Chronicle is the Only Paper in The Dalles that Receives the Associated Press Dispatches.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Mrs. Magoon of Portland, is visiting friends in the city.

The Tygh Ridge country had another nice shower night before last.

The Wasco Warehouse to-day shipped the last of a thousand sacks of wool for the season.

An exchange says that wheat is being burned up around Walla Walla owing to the lack of rain.

A correspondent writing to the Ochooco Review says that the town of Moro, in Sherman county, is soon to have a newspaper.

The case of Jane Skottowe vs O. S. L. & U. N. Ry. Co., is on trial and bids fair to consume the whole day. The jury is as follows:

W. Corson, Geo. Joles, W. T. Wiseman, Ben Foreman, Geo. Miller, J. F. Staniels, A. P. Jones, B. McCully, S. F. Wood, M. J. Spicenger, W. G. O'Dell and J. S. Schouling.

All bicyclists in the city are requested to meet this evening at the store of Messrs. Mays & Crowe at 8:30 o'clock sharp. All who intend to enter in the roadster and saddle races for the Fourth will meet at Mr. J. O. Mack's at 9 p. m.

The Ladies' Good Intent of the M. E. Church will give a lawn party in the lawn at the corner of Washington and Fourth streets, on Saturday evening the 13th. Every body invited. Ice-cream and cake and a social time are on the programme.

Jas. Knight who has resided at Kingsley for the past six or eight years passed through this city today on his way to Hood River where he intends to make his future home. We commend him to the good people of Hood River as an honest man and a good citizen.

The decisions of Judge Bradshaw are meeting with the hearty approval of the general public. A gentleman said to the writer today, "I have never seen a judge who tries harder both to oblige and do what is right or who came as near succeeding in doing both."

There is one more grave in the journalistic cemetery. Like all the good the deceased died young. His name was the American and it was born last Friday morning in Portland. It lived just two days notwithstanding the fact that there was said to have been forty thousand dollars worth of provisions in the financial larder. Be that as it may the nourishment was not forthcoming and it was quietly laid away beneath the daisies after a fitful life of forty-eight hours.

Mr. Alex McLeod, who is a juror at the present term of court, paid a flying visit to his home at Kingsley on Friday returning on Sunday. He reports grain on Tygh Ridge as looking well but not growing fast, on account of the cold weather. There was a frost on Saturday night which however, did no greatly perceptible injury. The ground is thoroughly soaked and if there is a poor crop in that neighborhood it will not be from lack of moisture. All they need there is warm weather. Mr. McLeod believes the Tygh Ridge will turn out as large a crop of grain this year as it ever did.

A friend of the CHRONICLE is blessed with two bright little daughters which are named "Bulah" and "Prudence." The family all love singing and as they are in possession of a piano and a mother that is a fine player and musician, they indulge in vocal exercises to a considerable extent. A Sunday or two ago they were all engaged in singing "Land of Bulah" and at the conclusion of the song little Miss Prudence, over whose fair head some six summers has passed, spoke up and said: "Mama why don't you sing land of Prudence sometimes? I should think you might!" The question is still unsolved.

A change in the management of the Ochooco Review has taken place, Dayton Elliot having purchased a half interest in the paper and hereafter it will be published and conducted by Douthitt & Elliot. A further change is indicated by the announcement that six years experience has taught the past manager that the field is too small for a strictly partisan paper and that in the future it will be run of strictly independent lines. The country cannot have too many independent papers and we wish it abundant success.

No Special Invitation.

An impression is out that admission to the academy entertainment is by special invitation. Such is not the case. The entire public is invited, and it is hoped the opera house will be crowded.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

To the Memory of the Late Judge J. H. Bird.

The bar of Wasco county, in the Seventh Judicial district of the state of Oregon having assembled for the purpose of expressing their sense of the loss which they and the people of this district have sustained by reason of the death of Hon. J. H. Bird, ex-judge of this judicial district and being desirous of expressing their feeling of sorrow and regret over his death in a formal and permanent manner. Now therefore he is resolved:

I. That the bar of said Wasco county do hereby attest their appreciation, admiration and respect for the fairness, integrity and ability which always accompanied and surrounded the conduct of judicial proceedings and the rendering of judicial decisions by this Hon. J. H. Bird during the five years that he was judge of this judicial district and also the earnest friendship which he won from among us by his uniform kindness and courtesy while practicing as an attorney at the bar of this court and we do hereby commemorate his public and private virtues which made him loved and respected by all who knew him, and which together with his ability and energy of character raised him to a leading position as a citizen, lawyer and judge.

Be it further resolved that we tender to the aged mother and to the brothers and sisters of the deceased our sympathy and express to them our deep sorrow and regret at the irreparable loss which they, far more than any of us have suffered by his death, and the chairman of this meeting is hereby requested to present a copy of these proceedings to the circuit court of the state of Oregon for the seventh judicial district holding terms in Wasco county, with the request that they be spread upon the records of said court and forever preserved as a memorial of the honor and respect in which said J. H. Bird was held by his brother attorneys, at the bar of this court. W. LAIR HILL, Chairman. B. S. HUNTINGTON, Secretary.

Mr. Chittenden's Resignation.

Deputy Postmaster W. L. Chittenden, of this city, has tendered his resignation and will shortly remove to Ocoosa, in Washington. Mr. Chittenden is one of the most amply qualified men in the post-office service of this coast. For seventeen years he was the assistant postmaster of Portland and it was the earnest desire of more than three-fourths of the people of that city that Mr. Chittenden be made postmaster in full, but while he was attending to his duties in giving that city the best postal service it has ever had, a wily politician, who had a pull, obtained the honors that Mr. Chittenden so richly deserved, and The Dalles has been the gainer in having been so fortunate as to have secured Mr. Chittenden's services. Always courteous and obliging, he is honored and respected by all who know him. We congratulate the people of Ocoosa in having won so good a citizen as Mr. Chittenden and desire to express our regrets that he is to leave The Dalles office.

Wasco Independent Academy.

Of course everybody knows that the annual entertainment of the pupils of the Academy is to take place this evening at 8 o'clock sharp; but very many do not and will not know what a pleasant evening has been provided, until the last recitation on the programme has been given.

The pupils will be assisted by Miss Anne M. Lang, pianist, and by one of the sweetest vocalists of the city.

Doors open at 7:30. Come everybody. The 10th annual commencement will be held Thursday evening next, at the Congregational church. It is expected that three young ladies will be graduated this year. No pains will be spared to make this commencement interesting and profitable to all who attend.

For God and Home and Native Land. THE DALLES W. C. T. UNION.

The Day's Demand.

God give us men! A time like this demands strong minds, great hearts, true faith, and ready hands; Men whom the lust of office does not kill; Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy; Men who possess opinions and a will; Men who have honor; men who will not flinch; Men who can stand before a demagogue and damn his treacherous flatteries without winking; Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog. In public duty and in private thinking. For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds, Their large professions and their little deeds, Mingle a selfish strife, to! Freedom weeps, Wrong rules the land, and waiting Justice sleeps. —Dr. J. G. Holland.

A Word in Season.

How good it is is shown in the following incident:

Those who were members of the Congregational Sunday school of The Dalles ten years ago and less will remember General O. O. Howard who so often stood before them with a word of instruction and encouragement, with his sleeve dangling at his side. He told them how he lost his arm at Fair Oaks June 1, 1862. Now he has this pleasant result of a word spoken in season:

As I was making my way to the hospital, weak from the loss of blood and from pain, I saw a young man intoxicated. He was so under the influence of whisky that he could hardly walk. As I came near him I stopped long enough to tell him it did not pay to drink. It would ruin him and he had better stop before the habit had control of him. I passed on to the hospital, had my arm amputated, and was sent home to recover. I saw or heard no more of the drunken soldier until a short time ago, when a letter from an officer in Washington told me his subsequent history. Impressed by the fact that in my wounded condition I had taken enough interest in him to stop and give him advice, he had then and there, quit drinking. He kept his resolution, and when the war was over, settled down to a life of steady, honest work. He gradually rose, and the letter from Washington told me he had just died a judge on the supreme bench in the state of New Hampshire, one of the foremost in that commonwealth. —Advance.

Mr. T. V. Powderly at a convention of labor leaders said of the saloons in the city of Pittsburg:

"Before the delegates to this convention separate to go to their homes, I would ask them to go on foot through the streets of Pittsburg, and study the temperance question as they go. They will see handsome buildings devoted to the sale of liquor on the principle streets and, if they estimate the cost of one of these buildings, they will learn that it runs away up into the thousands, far above the reach of the working man's income. On one of the streets of Pittsburg will be seen a saloon, the plate glass front of which is worth $5000, the bar and fixtures are worth $10,000, the paintings and other decorations are valued at $7000. All of this is separate and apart from the building itself, and of the plot of ground on which it stands. Stand guard at that door for twenty-four hours, and thousands of men will be seen passing in and out. Of the number nine-tenths will be wearing the garb of labor; they will be the workers in the mills and factories that make Pittsburg famous and foremost in the history of manufacture in the United States. Follow one of these men to his home, and contrast its appearance, condition and surroundings with the palace he stopped at on his way home, and not one iota of resemblance will be seen. Inquire if he owns the house he lives in, and it is more than likely that the answer will be in the negative. Ask him why he does not live in a better or more comfortable home, and his reply will be, "I cannot afford it." Take a walk through the entire city, and it will be seen that the palaces in which liquor is sold are costly and well furnished. Go still further, and it will be discovered that the men who live in the ill-ventilated, poorly-furnished, wretched tenements or dwellings, are the very men whose dimes and dollars have furnished the "palaces of hell" with plate-glass windows, expensive bars and fixtures, costly paintings and neat surroundings."

A curious lack of proper restriction upon the licensed liquor traffic of the national capital was brought out by the petition of a poor woman to the local authorities, asking that certain saloon-keepers, who had disregarded her personal requests, be prevented from selling liquor to her husband, who is, she says, an habitual drunkard. The petition was referred to the Chief of Police, and he in turn referred it to the Attorney for the District of Columbia in order to ascertain his legal authority in the premises, and that official, after a careful search, said there was no law by which these saloon-keepers could be prevented from selling the poor woman's husband all the liquor he wanted, notwithstanding his being an habitual drunkard and the piteous appeal of the wife. Congress offers a splendid field for temperance missionary work.

Washington has a model police judge. The other day a prisoner, arraigned before him, began to plead as an extenuation for the crime he had committed, the fact of his having been drunk. "Stop," said the judge; "I want it understood that no person who violates the law while in a state of intoxication need expect any leniency on that account in this court; he who deliberately clouds his brain must take the consequences."

Baby is sick.—The woeful expression of a Des Moines teamster's countenance showed his deep anxiety was not entirely without cause, when he inquired of a druggist of the same city what was best to give a baby for a cold? It was not necessary for him to say more, his countenance showed that the pet of the family, if not the idol of his life was in distress. "We give our baby Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," was the druggist's answer. "I don't like to give the baby such strong medicine," said the teamster. You know John Oleson, of the Waters-Talbot Printing Co., don't you? inquired the druggist. "His baby, when eighteen months old, got hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and drank the whole of it. Of course it made the baby vomit very freely but did not injure it in the least, and what is more, it cured the baby's cold. The teamster already knew the value of the Remedy, having used it himself, and was now satisfied that there was no danger in giving it even to a baby. For sale by Snipes & Kinersley.
