A HOPEFUL SIGN.

One of the most hopeful signs of the times lies in the fact that the party badge sits lightly on the shoulders of the voter of the present day. He is doing considerable thinking on his own account. The chain that binds the people to the old party bosses are no longer made of steel but of sand. The result of the election in Portland and The Dalles last Monday is but one more illustration of what is going on everywhere. No more important event in the interest of the state has happened for many a day than that which happened when Joe Simon and Jim Loton were both hurled into one common vortex. Let the good work go on. If the republican party desire to maintain supremacy in this state they must finish, at the first opportunity, what the consolidated city has begun. Let that party repudiate both Simon and Loton by reading them outside. The party will then breathe easier and will have a right to live which thousands else will not accord to it.

WE OWE PORTLAND NOTHING.

Just how much Portland wants an open river may be gathered from the fact that she has quietly sat at the mouth of the Willamette and allowed the Union Pacific to circumvent every effort to get connection on the lower river for the boat now being built at this place. When The Dalles had gone beyond her means to get connections with Portland, we would not have thanked Portland to have built a boat to make this connection. Well, we will have a boat on the lower river, in spite of the Union Pacific and Portland's apathy and when she gets her steam up she may get her back up, at the same time and run past Portland and on to Astoria. At any rate she will owe nothing to Portland and can go there or to Astoria as suits her best.

AN IMPORTANT CAMPAIGN.

The most critical campaign in the history of Ohio politics opened on Tuesday when the gavel fell on the convention that nominated by acclamation, William McKinley for governor of that state. The result of the contest will be watched with very great interest by all parties. The name of McKinley is so associated with the protective principle that his defeat will be accepted as the condemnation of that principle so far as Ohio is concerned. The republicans enter the campaign with the advantage of unity and enthusiasm, and no doubt every device known to modern politics will be used by both parties to win a favorable verdict from the people.

A New Arrangement.

EDITOR CHRONICLE: For sometime it has been evident to many of our citizens that our town needs another night watchman as one is not enough to protect life and property. Our town is strung out over a large area of hillsides, rock bluffs and river bank varying in altitude as high as three hundred feet above the river level. One man, to do his best, unhindered by disturbances, cannot patrol even the business portion of town of a night as other cities of our size are. Now, while times are dull, suppose our council appoint another night watchman and do away with the office of street commissioner, making the day officer act as street commissioner, to report needed repairs or improvements and hire workmen to do the work as the council may direct. Certainly the additional duties of the day officer or city marshal will not make his work very arduous as the additional force at night will tend to preserve better order and fewer offenses will be committed at night, each man being in different parts of the town and crossing beats, no fire can occur without the alarm being instantly given. At train time one officer can be at the train while the other keeps his beat. The same can be done when one makes an arrest and leaves his regular beat. This is business.

W. H. Y. KNOTT.

Today, in Buenos Ayres, a man who has a gold dollar can get $3.25 in paper money for it. The farmers' alliance idea of "government" printing "cheap money" has had two years of full sway among our misguided South American friends of the Argentine Republic, and the result is that when they go to market they carry a basket to hold the wads of money, and a little purse in which to put the provisions purchased.—Astorian.

Wasco Independent Academy.

The closing exercises of the Wasco Independent Academy, which occurred last week, showed beyond a doubt that The Dalles possesses a school which easily ranks among the best in the state. Attendance either at the entertainment, given by the pupils on Tuesday evening, or at Commencement, Thursday evening would have convinced any fair minded person that the teachers were efficient and pains-taking and that the pupils expected to master whatever they undertook.

The entertainment on Tuesday evening, proved a source of surprise and increasing pleasure from beginning to end. The Vogt Grand was filled to its utmost capacity and the audience testified their pleasure by hearty and well deserved applause.

"Only a Pansy Blossom," an old song in a new dress, proved especially attractive, while the "Tambourine Drill" fairly carried everything by storm. Where each one did so well it would be tedious to make personal mention.

Suffice it to say, therefore, that each selection was admirably adapted to the pupil who gave it. The accomplished preceptress, Miss Mary F. Lawrence, who had entire charge of the entertainment, deserves very great credit for its success.

Although the Academy graduated its first class in 1882 its alumni now numbers half a hundred. A large number of these assembled with the teachers Wednesday evening, when the days gone by were once more brought to mind, and love for Alma Mater rekindled.

On Tuesday evening the tenth annual commencement was held at the Congregational church which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion. The class of '91 consisted of Miss Iva C. Brooks, Miss Margaret A. Keys and Miss Nona I. Ruch.

Miss Ruch's essay on "Ideal Womanhood" gave evidence of extensive reading and careful thought. With nice discrimination she gathered from characters fictitious and historical, those qualities which were best in each, and from them constructed the character of an ideal woman who should be fit complement to the one Perfect Man.

Miss Keys' essay on "Success the Reward of Effort" showed plainly that she had learned not to be satisfied with mere gilt and tinsel, but ever to push on until the genuine metal was reached.

"The Influence of English Towns on the Progress of English Liberty" by Miss Brooks, showed careful and thoughtful study of the history of our Anglo-Saxon forefathers. While not offering so wide a scope for individuality as the other two, it was none the less meritorious because of its clearness and logical treatment.

In conferring the diplomas, Principal Ingalls spoke briefly upon the necessity of recognizing and obeying those divinely given impulses which urge all to a higher and nobler life. The enjoyment of the occasion was greatly increased by excellent music, both vocal and instrumental, kindly furnished by friends of the academy.

The following statement from Mr. W. B. Denny, a well known dairyman of New Lexington, Ohio, will be of interest to persons troubled with Rheumatism. He says: "I have used Chamberlain's Pain Balm for nearly two years, four bottles in all, and there is nothing I have ever used that gave me as much relief from rheumatism. We always keep a bottle of it in the house." For sale by Snipes & Kinersly.

Prince Napoleon's Pompeian Mansion.

When the part Prince Napoleon might have taken in French politics ceases to be contrasted with the part he actually did take he will be remembered for quite a different achievement. In a strange part of Paris he built a very curious mansion, and collected a brilliant circle of friends to witness a singular entertainment. The circumstance, once notorious, is now almost forgotten. Thirty-five years ago the prince went Pompeian mad. It was the fashionable craze of the day.

Artists, authors, dilettanti—they all took it; but the prince alone had funds and purpose to realize his wild project. If he could build a house just like one of those old Pompeian mansions, if he could furnish it classically, put in the right bronzes and statuettes, himself dress like an old Roman and get his friends to do the same—well, he actually reduced the dream to a fact.

In the avenue Montaigne, at that time perilously near the Bal Mabille, the palace was reared on the true Pompeian lines. Gerome painted the decorations—Homer chanting his ballads, and nymphs that represented the Odyssey and Iliad. Everything was classic and was Greek, but the Bonaparte blood flowed in the veins of the owner.

Prince Napoleon set up busts and statues of his family all round the atrium—Napoleon and Josephine and Marie Louise, Lucien, Charles, Louis and Jerome; they all had their place in this classic apartment. And here, before the emperor and empress, a French play was acted in classic costume—Favart, Brohan and Theophile Gautier being the company, and Got and Emile Augier among the audience.—Boston Herald.

Making Money Talk.

"Look at that fellow," said the man in the window.
"Who?" I inquired.
"That young fellow standing outside the rail."

"Well, what of it?"
"Don't you notice that five dollar bill he is holding in his hand?"

"Yes, Well?"
"He's been flourishing it around for five minutes. Bought two fifty cent seats in the gallery just now. Gave me a ten dollar bill. I gave him four silver dollars and that five. Been all this time putting the four into his pocket."

"Well, he had to unbutton his overcoat. That takes time."
"Yes, but it doesn't take five minutes. Besides, he could have put the five dollars into his vest pocket in no time. But he didn't. He holds it out in plain view."

"Suppose he does. Hasn't he a right to?"
"Of course. But don't you get on to the racket?"

"No. What is it?"
"Girl."
"Girl?"

"Yes. That's the girl standing over there in the corner. She's watching him. He's just drawn his week's pay, ten dollars, and is taking her to see the show. When they came in he flashed the ten dollars, and dazzled her with it a while before he got into line. Now he's letting her get a good look at the five dollars before he sinks it. It's a great scheme. No other fellow can steal that girl now. He's got her solid. And the long green did it."—Chicago Post.

Cobbler Sprague's Frugal Wife.

Ten thousand dollars in gold and greenbacks has been found secreted in an old table in the residence of John Sprague, a shoemaker, of Wilmington, Del. The money represents his deceased wife's savings for thirty-nine years. On Jan. 27 Mrs. Mary Sprague, wife of the cobbler, dropped dead, a victim of heart disease, in a drug store. The couple came to Wilmington from England thirty-one years ago. The husband is about sixty years of age, while the wife was nearly fifty-nine years old when she died. They were frugal and industrious, and during their thirty-nine years of married life the husband weekly gave the wife a certain sum of money for her use. He never questioned what she did with the surplus, but supposed it was regularly put in bank.

When Mrs. Sprague died search was made for the bankbook supposed to exist, but to no avail. The house was ransacked also, but no money was found. Finally Mrs. McGinley, a neighbor, suggested, as she had had a dream to that effect, that possibly the treasure might be secreted in an antique table, and this article of furniture was examined. Tightly wedged in an inside corner of the table were found a bag of gold and a roll of greenbacks, which, being counted, amounted to $10,000.—Cor. Philadelphia Record.

The Tableau.

The palmiest day of the tableau entertainment has rather gone by. Sacred and profane history, ancient and modern customs have been faithfully worked for varieties in tableau representation and their freshness has pretty well departed. An entertainment of pretty and picturesque scenes, unvaried by action or movement, is a somewhat mild form of amusement. For obvious reasons this kind of entertainment has had a long run of favor. Tableaux, represented by good folks that they all know, are something that the strictest church people can look upon without a feeling of sin, and a great deal of money for good causes has been realized in this way. They flourish best in home soil and presented by home talent and beauty, and not a little have they owed to the good natured puffs of amiable editors and the family pride which loves to see Sis on the stage in a fancy costume, looking as pretty as a peachblow vase.—Springfield Homestead.

Pleasant, but Unsafe.

"Wouldn't it be nice if some of the pleasant things said about persons after they are dead could only be said while they were still alive? It would cheer their dying hours."

"Yes, it would be nice, but it would hardly be safe."

"Why not?"

"They might recover."—New York Recorder.
