MORE OF THE SHOE FACTORY.

When the project of establishing a shoe factory at North Dalles was first mooted in this city no great difficulty was experienced in obtaining subscriptions from quite a number of our citizens, and these subscriptions, as we understand it, were simply a gift—a bonus given to start the enterprise, which gave the subscribers no proprietary interest in the concern. The impulse that prompted the subscriptions was broad and generous, extending beyond the narrow confines of our own city. It was above the narrow exclusiveness that supposed a city or factory on the other side of the river would, in any way be an injury to any interest on this side. But the enterprise has collapsed, at least temporarily, and the well meant efforts of our citizens have been frustrated. Whether the North Dalles factory shall ever come out from under the cloud that now envelopes it, time alone can tell, but if it should no one will rejoice more heartily than ourselves. Meanwhile, we are free to say that the same generosity displayed by some of our citizens toward the temporarily defunct enterprise would, if applied to the establishment of a shoe factory in The Dalles, undoubtedly meet with success. In order to make the industry remunerative and enable it to put its articles on the market at competitive rates, it is necessary to procure the raw material, as nearly as possible, from the producers, the Pacific coast is singularly situated in this respect and Portland has no advantage over The Dalles in the matter of raw material for a shoe factory, except only in the matter of freight, which is more than offset by lower rents. For all the heavy leather, used in the manufacture of boots and shoes, there is none produced in the United States equal in quality and price to that manufactured on the Pacific coast. This is so well recognized by eastern shoe manufacturers that our leather enters largely into the better class of their productions. A shoe factory at this place need never buy a pound of eastern sole leather. As regards upper leather, the question of freight is a mere bagatelle, when one is estimating the cost of the manufactured article. A pair of shoes, manufactured at this place might contain a pound of leather and the freight on that pound of leather amounting to, say half a cent (and less when the "Regulator" begins to run) is all the advantage Portland would have over The Dalles in this regard. The CHRONICLE has not got a shoe factory on the brain any more than it has any other enterprise that will build up the town and give employment to the people. It will gladly support anything tending in this direction. It has merely urged the establishment of a shoe factory because it believes it to be practicable, profitable and within the reach of our available resources. Any suggestion, from any quarter as to any enterprise that will possess these features more intensely will have our hearty support. Others may differ with us as to the value of a suggestion but no man shall go beyond us in unselfish desire for the welfare of our city and people.

Affairs in Ireland have taken a favorable turn and it would not at all be surprising if, before Gladstone should yet pass from off the scene, he should be able to accomplish what Parnell has so long attempted. Contrary to a widely extended belief, at the time of the event, it would now appear that the Irish people never made a more sagacious movement than they did when they cut loose from Parnell, after he had quarreled with Gladstone, the liberals, the Catholic church and the great majority of his own confederates in parliament.

Does it rain in Crook county? Well, slightly. Duck ponds in the street, umbrellas and gum-boots necessary to the comfort of the pedestrian and equestrian, grass to such a height on the range that the stockman's countenance is one broad smile, farmers greatly exercised as to where they can find storage room for their hay and grain, merchants have a jaded look from the constant stream of customers demanding their attention, butchers find beef in the streets and the saloon keepers find that men never get so wet but they can get wetter. And after all this ask if it rains in Crook county.—Spokane Review.

The Citizens' ticket at The Dalles was successful, and now Astoria is threatening to follow in the wake of Portland and The Dalles at the next election, with every prospect of success.—Express.

THE NEW RAILROAD PLAN.

What is Being Done by the Single-Rail and Saddle-Track Company.
East Oregonian.
Dr. J. B. Mahana, president of the Single-Rail and Saddle-Track Company, was in the city today from Freewater. The doctor returned recently from Portland, where he has been arranging plans for railroad building, several propositions having been received by the company in this state. The first road to be built in Oregon on the new plan will probably be constructed from Barlow's, the "garden spot" of the Willamette valley, twenty-five miles below Portland, through several fertile prairies to the Willhoit soda springs, and perhaps to the coal mines. The proposed road is twenty miles in length. Dr. Mahana would have completed arrangements for its construction while below, had he not been called home by the illness of Mrs. Robbins. A pamphlet fully explaining the new system is being prepared in a Portland printing office. It will be illustrated with cuts of trains and engines, giving an idea of the plan, and have on the initial page a handsome and appropriate emblem of the company. Following are the names of some of the engineers, civil and locomotive, who have examined Dr. Mahana's models, and express their public endorsement of the company's system: F. Riffe, (formerly chief engineer of the O. & W. T.) and Olaf H. Phil, of the Oregon Bridge Company, Portland; George S. Dillman, W. E. Condon, D. D. Barford, John A. Hurlbert, civil engineer, Portland; A. O. Eckleson, Southern Pacific; W. F. Bruckner, Albina; Levi S. Scruton, Rochester, N. H.; Chappell Burk, Rutland, Vt.; Samuel L. Lowell, Cascade Locks, J. G. Maddock, president of the First National bank, Goldendale, also indorses the plan.

Cynics May Not Enjoy Pickwick Papers.
Why criticize "Pickwick"? The interpolated stories are distracting and tiresome, skip the stories. The Fleet episode is not comparable in power or effect to the Marshalsea scenes in "Little Dorrit." But skip the Fleet. All the rest remains a priceless treasure. How are we to decide with the cocksureness of a Fitzgerald that this thing is exaggerated and that unnatural? Let us take a Book as we find it. The moment you apply the principles and the standards of real life the illusion vanishes. Not the least marvelous characteristic of the author's genius is the sureness with which he stills your spellbound in his enchanted pleasure.

So long as the magic holds, you travel with pleasure in the coaches; you go with rapture to Dingley Bell, you admire young ladies with far round their boots, you applaud Sam Weller; you thank heaven and Charles Dickens for Mr. Weller the elder, and you lavish your hopes and fears on Mr. Pickwick himself. But try to place the characters in the real world, and you find you have to deal with "impossibles," who perambulate the country tipping aloft, brandy and water and punch, who kiss the servants maids, whose womenkind are as "impossible" as themselves, and whose circumstances and surroundings are distinguished by nothing save an uninviting plenty. To the dyspeptic who thus essays to "realize" these friends from youth to middle age, these heroes of the one great Cockney epic, the posthumous papers of the Pickwick club are not to be recommended. For those thrice fortunate that boast themselves encephalic they are the most invigorating tonic.—National Observer.

How Do You Bow?
Did you ever watch people bow? It is quite a study to note the variety of facial contortions and the divergence as to the method of bobbing the head. You have probably noticed the dignified little bend of the head accompanied by a passive countenance. It does not mean much, and when it does the special graces and commendable virtues are not indicated in the definition. A genial bow has as much to account for as a hearty hand clasp, and one frigid recognition has been known to drench a sprouting friendship with ice water and kill it on the spot.

Heads are often tossed back and then bent down, and I have taken delight in observing a man who opens his mouth as if to facilitate the tilting of his head. On some occasions a greeting is given by a solemn wagging of the head, just as people in some localities shake hands with a motion from side to side. With a few people the whole face lights up as they greet their friends, and to those cheery, whole souled mortals we give an unasked and voluntary confidence. Lips can be curled into a fairly good imitation of a smile. Eyes can be danced into a dreary semblance of mirth. Words can be strung together by the brain and uttered in tones of counterfeit joy, but we can read the falseness and mark the absence of heart on every feature. Those who are glad to see us rarely disguise the fact, and those who are not can scarcely force our belief from resting upon the foundation of a perhaps disagreeable truth.—Toronto Globe.

What the Hatter Said About People.
A good way to judge a man is to listen to his talk when he comes in to buy a hat for himself. It is all right for a man to ask his tailor what he ought to wear. But every man ought to know what sort of a hat is most becoming to him. No article of a man's wearing apparel so completely makes or unmakes him as his hat. There are men who should never wear any other than a silk hat, just as there are men who should never wear anything in the way of a hat except a Derby. There are men who will never look like anything human with either. Some men were born to wear nothing but the soft hat. I would not vote for a man who does not know what sort of a hat he should wear without taking the advice of another on the subject. I believe it was Shakespeare who said that dress proclaims the man. Shakespeare knew what he wanted to say, I reckon, but if he ever paid any attention to the matter he would have said the hat. It is my observation that a man will say more foolish things when he goes to buy a hat than at any other time.—Interview in Chicago Tribune.

Fire Among Savage Nations.
According to Pliny fire was a long time unknown to some of the ancient Egyptian tribes, and when a celebrated astronomer made them acquainted with that element and how to produce it they were wild with delight. The Persians, Phoenicians, Greeks and several other nations acknowledge that their ancestors were once without the comforts which fire bestows: the Chinese confess the same of their progenitors. Pompanon, Mola, Plutarch and other ancient writers speak of nations which, at the time when they wrote, knew not the use of fire, or had just recently learned it. The inhabitants of the Marian islands, which were discovered in 1551, had no idea of fire or its uses. Their astonishment knew no bounds when they saw it applied to wood, most of them taking it to be some kind of an animal which the sailors had brought with them and which must be fed on wood.—St. Louis Republic.

Economy in Horseshoes.
A horseshoe has been patented in Canada which is provided with removable calks. These calks are easily removable, and when they require sharpening calks may be put in in about five minutes. Two sets are kept on hand, one sharp and the other dull; this effects a great saving. The shoe has tapered dovetail recesses, in which the tapered shank of the calk fits.—New York Telegram.
