The Dalles Chronicle is advocating Chenewith—The Routine of Duty.

The Third Regiment O. N. G. went into camp here Monday afternoon on the into camp here Monday afternoon on the grounds of Mr. Irvine, about two miles west of town. The encampment grounds are fine, being a freshly mown meadow, and the city of tents with its regular streets and blocks, is as pretty as possible, though the present warm spell is of neglected opportunities if it fulls to cost, and will add another to its long list of neglected opportunities if it fails to do so. We have only the kindliest feelings towards The Dalles, and earnestly desire to see the "Key City to the Inland Empire," take her proper place as the biggest, and most prosperous city of eastern Oregon. To do this she must inaugurate a system of manufactories, and a shoe factory is a good starter. When she does this, Hood River will start a big tannery, using the hides purstart a big tannery, using the hides pur-chased in The Dalles, and will furnish an abundance of certain grades of leather. We have unlimited quantities of the very best tanning material, hemlock bark, and besides furnishing leather, we will make a market for the hides which are now shipped east, and back again in the shape of boots and shoes. We wish the Chronic s more power to its elbow, and that it may succeed in convincing The Dalles people of the necessity of grasping every opportunity as it occurs and making a start on a shoe factory.
