MORE MONEY—A SUGGESTION.

If the government can safely issue an unlimited amount of irredeemable paper currency and loan it to the people on the subtreasury plan or in any other way, why should two per cent. or any other rate of interest be charged? Why not loan it to the people free? It is a good thing to place money in the hands of the people at a reduction of six to eight per cent. below current rates, it surely would be better to wipe out the interest altogether; and if not why not? The cost to the government of the paper, engraving and printing could be met by issuing enough greenbacks to cover it. If the printing &c. of a few billions of paper money should cost the government, say a quarter of a million let the government simply print a quarter of a million extra and the cost is met. If the two per cent. interest is intended to help pay the running expenses of the government, why not issue paper money to meet these running expenses and thereby still further lighten the burdens of the borrowing classes? In fact if irredeemable paper money is as good a thing as it is cracked up to be, there is no sense in the world in the government taxing the people a dollar for its running expenses. Just issue enough greenbacks and the thing is done. In good sooth there is no limit to what might be done in this line. If we want a navy and coast defenses just issue enough greenbacks to pay for them and there you are. If our rivers and harbors need opening and improvement, let the work be done and pay for it in greenbacks. It would not then matter a penny whether the next congress was a "billion dollar congress" or a ten billion one; for not a dollar of the cost would come out of the people's pocket. There would be no necessity for politicians to lie awake nights, under the dread of a bankrupt treasury. Just let the government printing presses go and fill her up from cellar to dome and all danger from that direction would be averted.

DUEUR.

A trip to Dufur last Saturday found the spring grain looking fine, and everywhere the promise of an abundant crop.

The charming little town is now looking its best as the shade and fruit trees, planted only a few years ago, embower many of the dwellings in thickets of leafy verdure. Fruit trees of all kinds are groaning under a weight of fruit that gives ample proof, if proof were needed, of the excellent adaptation of the bench lands of that neighborhood to fruit culture, while the gardens are filled with a luxuriant growth of all kinds of vegetable plants.

Much of this is doubtless owing to irrigation as the Dufur water works afford an abundant supply of this fluid for all needed purposes. These water works, simple and inexpensive as they are, are the pride of the town, and the special pride of their architect and designer L. J. Klinger. And well they may for they are as cheap and durable as they are simple and effective.

Up to within a few weeks ago, two large wind mills forced the water of the creek up to a reservoir on an elevation back of the town. Now the mills are "for sale cheap" and a little overshot wheel, six feet in diameter by five and a half in width, which, together with the pump, cost the town only a hundred and fifty dollars, does the work and does it more effectually. The capacity of the pump is 112,000 gallons in twenty-four hours, but the wheel seems to have power sufficient to drive a pump of twice that capacity. The water used to drive the wheel is taken out of the mill race of the Dufur flouring mill and raised to the necessary elevation by a short flume, and after it is discharged from the wheel it returns again to the race. A close fitting drum, covering the front of the wheel, holds the water in the elbow-shaped buckets till it is exhausted below and a flexible gate regulates the supply of water to the wheel. The running expenses are simply the wear and tear of machinery, and as there is scarcely any to either wear or tear the expenses may be placed at nil.

An invitation to visit the orchard and garden of Dr. Vanderpool brought us into a perfect wilderness of fruits and berries and vegetables. The Doctor has a great deal of something and apparently a little of everything. There are pears, apples, plums, peaches, prunes, cherries, mulberries, gooseberries, currants, blackberries, raspberries, grapes, besides a new species which he calls Japanese wine berries derived from an original plant that cost its importer the sum of $1,000 for the single plant. The rapid growth of some of the trees in this young orchard is very remarkable. The Doctor pointed our attention to a cherry tree of the Black Republican variety which has attained a height of seventeen feet in three years, with a width of branches ten feet in diameter.

By a very easy transition we made our way from the orchard to the laboratory of the S. B. Manufacturing Co. To one who remembers the time when Dr. Vanderpool used a small pot on his kitchen stove to heat his preparations, the sight was indeed a surprise. Now several large kettles, heated by a furnace, have taken the place of the stove-pot, and no less than seven different rooms are required for conducting the business. Here we met the business manager Mr. A. J. Brigham who, less than three years ago bought a half interest in the business for $200. This was before the stove-pot was discarded. Then the sale of the medicines was confined nearly altogether to Dr. Vanderpool's old patients and acquaintances, and the company has customers from San Francisco to Baltimore, Maryland, and from Northern Washington to Southern California, and the medicines have the best testimony any proprietary medicines can have, and that is, they are better liked at home, and where they have been longest in use, than anywhere else.

What Can be Made of it.

Just after the "Regulator" was launched a lady said that the name of the boat was a unique one and a number of words could be made therefrom. She made the attempt and below is the result:

James Underhill of Boyd gave the CHRONICLE office a pleasant call today. Mr Underhill lives on the divide between Fifteen-mile and the Deschutes and after a residence of thirteen years he says he never saw as fine a prospect for grain as there is this year on the high lands of this county.

The soldiers of the second regiment, O. N. G., went into annual encampment at Eugene on the 27th of June. The grounds selected adjoining the town on the west are excellent for the purpose, furnishing a neat, clean camping place and hard level grounds for drilling. Eugene welcomes the militia boys.—Eugene Guard.
