How He Expressed It.

In a thriving village of Oxford county are people who still enjoy relating a little incident illustrative of the confusion likely to fall upon the stranger to our language who uses synonyms indiscriminately. The pastor of the leading church had made arrangements to exchange with a good German brother of the same denomination. Having himself been a witness to some lu licrous mistakes of that worthy, the minister was not without a feeling of uneasiness.

The Gorman having arrived in the village Saturday was courteously invited to a pleasant gathering near the parsonage. The elite of the town were present. All went well with our German friend until be was introduced to the beautiful Miss Howard, whose matchless complexion was the pride of the village. Feeling that such beauty deserved some recognition, and wishing to compliment the beautiful stranger, the German exclaimed with his beaming ad miration.
