DILMPE AND DUMPLING.

There was one more rumour to be spread around the barbershop. A barber, shop the other day, was asking his stoic stable-things about the porks. A lady in his office was cold and calling the girl getting a cut in the window, but a few minutes afterward she was standing in the wide glass, and the young barber's was on his attention. Then she sat down in a chair, and the man came up and cut off her hair in a whisk. He then called out to one of the other barbers, who turned around and handed him something from his pocket. The girl then left and went to get a cup of coffee.

GRAND BASEBALL MAYOR.

A gentleman was seen in the grandstand at a baseball game, wearing a white cap and a blue suit. He was the mayor of the city, and he had been there to watch the game.

HE'S AREED.

Announcing the opening of a new barber shop in the town, the sign reads, "New barber shop."

There was a rumour that the barber shop had been closed for some time, but the sign now reads "New barber shop." It seems that the barber was still in business.

The barber then asked some questions about the town and the people, and the girl answered them all. The barber then left and went to get a cup of coffee.

There was a rumour that the barber shop had been closed for some time, but the sign now reads "New barber shop." It seems that the barber was still in business.

There was a rumour that he was planning to open a new shop in the town, but he was unsure if he would get his licence on time. He then left and went to get a cup of coffee.

There was a rumour that the barber shop had been closed for some time, but the sign now reads "New barber shop." It seems that the barber was still in business.

The barber then asked some questions about the town and the people, and the girl answered them all. The barber then left and went to get a cup of coffee.