THE QUEEN'S SABOTS

General Philip M. Morin, Marquis de la Fayette, has just been seen at this city's Grand Opera, in the role of the hero in the famous play by Dalayrac. The first performance of the work was given in this city in 1797, and the play has been acted in the French theatre ever since. The Marquis de la Lafayette is a descendant of the famous Marquis de Lafayette, who was a champion of liberty and a great hero of the American Revolution.

A young girl of nine, the daughter of a Sebastopol trader, has just returned from a tour of the Crimean War. She tells of the bravery of the soldiers, the horrors of the battlefields, and the beauty of the countryside. She also tells of the children who live in the hills, and the flowers that grow there.

The young girl is a member of a large family, and she is the only child of her parents. She has been educated at home, and she speaks English fluently. She is a charming little girl, with a sweet temper and a kind heart.

THE MILLER'S LITTLE DAUGHTER

The miller's little daughter is a bright and happy child, who loves to play in the fields and to read books. She is a good pupil in school, and she enjoys learning new things.

THE DOLLS OF COOK

When the doll was first introduced, it was a very novel and interesting novelty. It was a small piece of wood, about the size of a child's hand, with a hole in the top, into which a little ball could be placed. The ball was made of a soft material, and it rolled about in the doll's body, giving it a strange and amusing appearance. The doll was at first called a "whirligig," but it was soon given its present name.

The doll was a great success, and it was soon adopted by many people as a toy. It was a favorite with children, and it was also popular with grown-ups, who enjoyed the novel and amusing appearance of the toy. The doll was made in many different shapes and sizes, and it was sold in many different parts of the country.

The doll is still used as a toy, and it is a popular subject of amusement.
