BRIEF STATE NEWS.

Fire destroyed 300 bushels of grain on the farm of J. H. McClung, two and a half miles north of Eugene.

The wheat crop in the vicinity of Dufur, Wasco county, is a disappointment. The grain is shrunken and it is feared that very little in that neighborhood will be found in a different condition.

Huntington is fast becoming one of the prominent stock-shipping points in Eastern Oregon. On Friday 1100 head of sheep were shipped to Chicago, and 300 head of beef cattle were shipped to Portland and the Sound markets.

At the Harrisburg saw mill during the past two weeks there have been delivered by loggers a drive of 2,000,000 feet of logs. At Coburg there were delivered at Goodale's mill 4,000,000 feet of logs, which were from the McKenzie river logging camps.

A very destructive fire occurred at Lostine, Wallowa valley, on the night of the 29th of August, consuming a livery stable, five head of horses, harness, hay, etc., also burning the Keeler house and the houses of Frank Johnson and Mr. Masterson. This was the second fire within the last sixty days.

The Baker City Blade says it had the pleasure of lifting and viewing a sack of pure gold, running up to the amount of $1000 or $1200, brought to the city by W. A. Weatherly from his Chicken creek mines, where he has been for four or five days in the interest of their mines, and the sack speaks for the mines as to their flourishing condition.

The Roseburg Plaindealer says one of the mines in the Bohemia district has been bonded to some capitalists for $189,000. We learn that two capitalists have been inspecting the Anna mine in that district and it is reported they have offered $30,000 cash for the mine. The Bohemia district may yet get into the hands of some big company that will bring forth the precious metals hidden there.

GENERAL PERSONAL MENTION.

Ingalls' fee for the lecture is $500. Greatness comes high, but we must have it.

Dr. Gray, the Afghan ameer's physician, reports that forty feet of snow fell at Cabul last winter.

The poet Swinburne is spending his summer vacation in an ancient house near Cheltenham, England, which was built by Sir Walter Raleigh.

The kaiser is a great admirer of white. Twenty of his different uniforms are made of white material, and his wardrobe is said to contain more than a hundred pair of white trousers.

Secretary Bayard's daughter, the Countess Lewenhaupt, intends to pass the fall and possibly the winter in Sweden. It is not improbable that she will make her permanent home in King Oscar's kingdom.

The little King of Spain does not know his letters yet, and all mental education has been forbidden him. He is so fragile and puny physically that the slightest exertion of the mind fatigues him.

Bishop Cox, of Buffalo, who can write as good poetry as he can preach catchy sermons, has now turned his attention to the horrors of the theatrical bill board, and lashes its lasciviousness so sternly that people are beginning to forget how he satirized woman on a bicycle.

Major William Warner, ex-commander-in-chief of the Grand Army, received a visit in his St. Louis home a few evenings ago from representatives of the colored race to thank him for his manly companionship of their people at the late meeting in Detroit.

It is said that Joseph Pulitzer is dangerously ill in Europe with nervous prostration. He has been cruising along the coast of the North of Europe this summer in his private steam yacht, but was obliged to desert it and send it home two weeks ago, while he submitted himself to treatment for his disorder by the best physicians of London, Berlin and Paris, who were called into consultation on his case.

ON A LONELY ISLAND.

Robbed, Wrecked and Nearly Starved in the Heart of Beh-ing Sea.

Ivan Petroff, the census enumerator for Alaska, had a narrow escape during his last visit there, from which he has just returned. Dr. C. Hart Merriam and others, who came down with him in the Albatross, tell the Astorian that when he was picked up he was looking exceedingly thin, and was all but starved by his experience on Numivok island.

Mr. Petroff had arranged with a sea captain in 1860 for taking the census of the island. There are 600 semi-barbarous natives there. The island is dreary and rock-bound, and about 130 miles in circumference. It lies in the heart of Behring sea and is little frequented by whites. The sea captain failed to keep his promise and Mr. Petroff concluded to take the census himself. He was carried upon the revenue cutter, and it was ordered to call again in a month and take him off. He found the natives quite hostile. When they found he had not brought money to trade with them they would not even give him a hut to lie in.

He bought a skin-boat and some provisions, however, and finally arranged to get a rude hut. In this he stored the purchases. One night most of his belongings were stolen, besides his gold spectacles. Then he loaded up what he had left for a trip around the island. He was out two days when a storm came up, overturning his boat and he had to swim for his life. He could not see very well and had a hard time to reach the shore. There he met more natives; he was refused anything to eat. For two days he had nothing except berries. Finally he succeeded in getting around to where he started, and by this time the natives were somewhat friendlier and supplied him with a little food.

When the Corwin picked him up he was nearly starved, and was yet quite thin when transferred to the Albatross.

HE BEAT THE BULLET.

A Bangor Man's Remarkable Race With a Confederate Soldier.

It was in a well-known hotel in Bangor. A party of gentlemen were conversing on one subject and another, says the Bangor News. During a lull in the conversation one gentleman noticed a scar on the hand of another and interrogated him as to the cause. The other answered that he received it in a very curious way, and told the following story in regard to it:

I got that wound in the battle of Gettysburg. I had been fighting all day and felt very tired, and so sat down on a rock and shot from there.

I was just loading up my gun when a long, lean, lank fellow darted by me, making for the woods like a streak of greased lightning. I up with my gun and let drive at him, but he didn't drop, and, as I had just shot 999 and didn't want to lose the thousandth, I started after him.

I never saw a man run so fast in all my adventurous life, and I could see I was gaining on him, but every once in a while I lost sight of him behind a tree or rock.

I noticed a lull in the fight, and glancing aside I saw both armies had stopped fighting and were straining their eyes to see the race.

That raised my courage, and I forgot all about being tired. Just then I made a spurt of speed, and as I did so I felt something strike my hand, which spread out like the fan of a windmill.

Well, to make a long story short, I caught up with him and was about to collar him when he turned about and tried to stab me. I dodged his blow, and just then something hit him and he fell over dead.

I sat down beside him to rest, and as I did so I noticed blood trickling down my hand. On closer investigation I found that there was a bullet hole in the palm of my hand.

The dead man had a bullet in his breast, and I am positive in my belief that both wounds were made by the same bullet, and that it was the same bullet that I had fired at the Confederate.

The race was so hot that I caught up with and passed it some time during my chase. That is why I now wear that scar.

A SNAKE IN HIS STOMACH.

Death of James H. O'Grady, who Thought He Was Thus Afflicted.

James H. O'Grady, aged 26 years, who died in Syracuse, N. Y., recently, acquired wide fame in medical circles as the man with a snake in his stomach. O'Grady was a canalboat captain until three years ago, when depressed and debilitated by his hallucination he left that occupation to do laboring work at such times as he felt able. He imagined that he could feel the snake moving around inside of him, and thought at times that it attempted to crawl out of his throat, but was prevented from doing so on account of its size. He and his friends estimated that it must be at least ten feet long. He believed that he swallowed the reptile while drinking water from a pool about ten years ago, and that ever since then it had slowly grown until it was at last large enough to manifest its presence.

The local papers noticed the strange case last fall. The story traveled over the country, and the result was that O'Grady began to receive letters recommending remedies for the removal of the snake until about 100 had been received. Some of the letters were evidently written by practical jokers, while others were apparently sincere. One man recommended O'Grady to run a pair of tongs down his throat, fasten it to the snake, pull it out and put salt on its tail. Another man, who said he had been troubled the same way, advised O'Grady to first starve the snake; then he was to put a pan of warm milk in front of his mouth and catch the reptile as it came out to eat.

The widow said today that she would permit no post mortem examination to be made. She was sure that a snake had bored through her husband's stomach and into his lungs, causing consumption, and that was all she cared to know about it. A friend of O'Grady said that he had seen the snake make its way up the man's throat, and try to get out. O'Grady could not get to bed, but sat in a chair, and in this chair he died.

A number of local physicians visited the man out of curiosity. The one who was last to attend him said there was no question that the man died of consumption. "He was troubled with intestinal gas," said the physician, "and this moving around inside of him caused him to imagine he had a snake in his stomach. It would be impossible for a snake to live inside of any person, but a great many ignorant persons believe that they have some sort of a reptile inside of them. It has been proved that all snakes require fresh air, and that they could not possibly live in a man's stomach."

ATTACKED BY A PANTHER.

The Annual Jump Among a Gang of Railroad Hands and Kills One.

TALLAHASSEE, Sept. 9.—While a gang of section men were working on the Florida & Western railway today, twenty miles from here, along a Big swamp, a huge and ferocious panther leaped from a tree and struck McWilliams, knocking him flat. The rest of the hands fled, leaving McWilliams to fight alone. The contest was short and bloody. McWilliams had no weapon except a shovel, and in a few minutes the beast had him mangled beyond recognition. The rest of the gang secured arms and returned, but they were too late, as the panther tore the arms off the corpse and fled to the swamp. Work has been suspended on the railway, the men refusing to work.

THE TRADES UNION CONGRESS.

The Eight-Hour a Day Question the Prominent Theme Discussion.

NEWCASTLE, Sept. 7.—The trades union congress opened here this morning. There are over 500 delegates present, and they represent 1,500,000 British workmen. Thomas Burt, a member of parliament and of royal labor commission was elected president. Prominent among the questions to be discussed is whether eight hours should or should not constitute a legal day's work. On this subject there is increasing diversity of opinion.

Life Was Not Worth Living.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—F. L. Carolin registered at the Prescott House this morning as Wm. F. Deyoung of Fresno. Shortly afterward an explosion which shook the neighborhood attracted attention to his room and it was found he had committed suicide by exploding a dynamite bomb. The remains of the man were scattered all over the room and one of his arms was found in the street. He told a number of persons here that he intended taking his life as he wanted to create a sensation for the newspapers, but in a note to the coroner, which he left he says he committed suicide because life was not worth living.

Aiding the Lottery.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 6.—George W. Peck, of Peck's Sun, and a son of Governor Peck, was arrested this morning on a charge of circulating through the mail copies of his paper containing Louisiana lottery advertisements. At the time the law was passed the lottery people secured numerous legal opinions as to its constitutionality, and these were printed in Peck's Sun. It is now charged that they were published to influence public opinion and were paid advertisements. Mr. Peck was released on $500 bail.

Arrested Again.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7.—J. Frank Lawrence, formerly individual ledger clerk at the Keystone bank, who is now serving a sentence in the penitentiary for the share he took in the robbing of the bank, was again arrested today for making false entries.

Labor day was generally observed here by closing all financial institutions, (federal) offices and a cessation of business.

Nothing In It.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 7.—Senator Hawley was this morning shown a copy of last night's dispatches stating he was at Cape May conferring with President Harrison relative to accepting a place in the cabinet made vacant by the resignation of Secretary Proctor. He was asked if there was any truth in it. "None at all," he answered, the matter referred to has not entered his mind.

Chinamen Returned.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Sept. 7.—The judge of the United States circuit court just rendered a decision returning two Chinamen, arrested under the exclusion act, to Canada, from which dominion they hold passports, contrary to United States laws.

Labor Day in Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 7.—Labor day in this city was celebrated with much enthusiasm. Fully 20,000 people witnessed the labor parade. A meeting was held at the park in the afternoon at which speeches were made by labor advocates and politicians.

Astoria to the Front.

This afternoon Hon. George A. Liebe received a check for $213.25, signed A. Scherneckau of Astoria, which is the sum of a contribution by the citizens of Astoria, raised by the kind efforts of Mr. Scherneckau and Hon. C. L. Fulton. This is very kind of our friends in Astoria and it will be long and gratefully remembered by the people of The Dalles.

A Lady Lion Tamer. Col. Boone, who is now in this country exhibiting his horde of performing lions, which are performed free and unmuzzled in a circus ring is accompanied by a female lion trainer—a "lion queen," as the show bills style her. Her name is Millie Carlotta. She is not over twenty years old, and is said to be as brave as she is beautiful. She enters the enclosure accompanied by her noble patrol dog "Saxon" and to see her in the arena surrounded by half a dozen thousand-pound, lordly lions, directing their movements with as little apparent concern as if they were a lot of harmless cats, makes the spectator shudder for an instant. Col. Boone is authority for the statement that women are better adapted for performing with wild beasts, than men. Be this as it may we will not controvert the remark made by a lady, who upon hearing this statement of Col. Boone's suggested that this was a fact and that only a woman was capable of subjugating the most intractable of all animals—man.

Carlotta drives the lions harnessed to chariots, feeds them from her hand, makes them posture, dance, leap, play see-saw, ride tricycles, and many other equally astonishing acts. This is one of the famous features of the famous Forpaugh show, which is to exhibit here for one exhibition only, Wednesday afternoon September 16.

John Booth has obtained the agency for the Warner butter, it will hereafter be found at 62 Second street. 3t
