THE ALLIANCE.

The farmers movement has assumed so many forms since its commencement and has so many different organizations that one can scarcely be blamed if he fails to keep track of them all. It seems beyond question however that there are alliance men and alliance men and that there is the widest possible difference between them. While the CHRONICLE cannot become the organ of any party it would consider itself unworthy of support if it did not, on all questions that relate to the best interests of the farming and laboring classes, stand shoulder to shoulder with them. But this by no means involves the adoption of every wild and visionary scheme that is now being advocated in their behalf. The editor of the CHRONICLE will heartily sympathize with any movement that will tend to give the classes referred to a just representation in the National Congress or State Legislature, but he has not a word of sympathy for a class of so called alliance men who, while professing to denounce both of the old parties are simply playing into the hands of one which they have really never abandoned. The right to form a third party is unquestioned but one loses all respect for its advocates, while they assert their independence of party shackles will with the same breath, tacitly acknowledge themselves satisfied if the movement will result in placing one of the old parties in power. We are pleased to know however, that this criticism does not apply to the Wasco county alliance, as a body, whatever the objects and opinions of private members may be. A highly esteemed member of a Wasco county alliance has placed in our hands a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the "Farmers' Alliance," and after a careful perusal we are free to say that it is in every way excellent and worthy of support. Here is the simple statement given as to its object: "The objects of the Farmers' Alliance are to unite the farmers for the promotion of their interests, socially, politically and financially. To secure a just representation of the agricultural interests of the country in the National Congress and the State Legislature. To demand the prohibition of alien cattle and land syndicates and to oppose all forms of monopoly, as being detrimental to the best interests of the public." In the article relating to the qualification for membership it is expressly stipulated that no person shall be admitted who is not a farmer, farm laborer, mechanic, school teacher, country physician or minister of the gospel, who does not believe in the existence of a supreme being and is of industrious habits. Another section provides that there shall be no political or religious test for membership. Another article asserts: "It is deemed contrary to the spirit of the order for brothers to go to law with each other. Therefore it is earnestly recommended, when pecuniary difficulties arise between members, that they settle the matter amicably among themselves, or failing to do so, by arbitration." In the obligation the candidate solemnly avows that he has not joined the alliance from any selfish, improper or partisan motive. Assuming that it is right to form secret societies for political objects there is certainly nothing objectionable in these articles. We are assured that the alliances banded together under this constitution while united for political objects, are not partisan. The members do not believe in the wisdom of the sub-treasury scheme nor government warehouses nor wild inflation of paper or depreciated silver currency. They do not believe in a third party movement but they do believe in having something to say regarding the men sent to represent them in the halls of legislature. And they are right and when the time comes to name candidates for office no one will be better pleased than the CHRONICLE, if these alliance men will demand that only clean, honorable and upright men shall be nominated, men who are in touch with the tillers of the soil and who cannot be bribed or bought. This they have a right to demand and it is their duty to do so and if they are true to one another they can demand it in a way that will compel attention.

in the single tax doctrine and an ardent worshiper at the shrine of Henry George. In a late issue of that journal George's theory is expounded and indorsed in the following manner: "Henry George admits frankly enough that the single tax, stripped of all extraneous mistiness and reduced to its simplest elements, is a policy of land confiscation. He holds that land is a common enjoyment of mankind, like air and water, and that rent is an iniquity. He would abolish rent by heaping all the taxation upon land and so compel its owners to pay back to the people, in form of the state, all they receive from the public in form of occupiers or exploiters of the land. That is, the state will confiscate the rent from land. To confiscate the increment is to confiscate the thing itself, since a thing like land has value only for the increment it will bring to its owner. The aim of the single tax is the destruction of private property in land." This is the single tax theory as expounded by one of its most ardent admirers and advocates. Farmers of Oregon how do you like it?

"In a country of equal rights and privilege the laborer should be allowed to pay his debts in the same kind of coin he receives for his labor. Any denial of this privilege stamps our boasted equality a delusion."—Portland Dispatch.

Is not this harmless thunder. Who denies this right? Is there not another right, the right of private contract? If one lends a sum of money in gold or its equivalent, has he not a right to contract for gold in repayment? The constitution gives him this right, but if not, he has a right to keep his money in his pocket, or devote it to some other use. No man has a right to blame him for protecting himself from the doings of financial cranks. The editor of the Dispatch would himself exercise the right, despite his brutum fulmen.

An Old Adage.

There is an old adage: "What every body says must be true." Henry Cook, of New Knoxville, Ohio, in a recent letter says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has taken well here. Everybody likes it on account of the immediate relief it gives." There is nothing like it to loosen and relieve a severe cold. For sale by Snipes & Kinerly, druggists, dw

They Speak From Experience.

"We know from experience in the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy that it will prevent croup," says Messrs. Gabberry & Worley, Percy, Iowa. They also add that the remedy has given great satisfaction in this vicinity, and that they believe it to be the best in the market for throat and lung diseases. For sale by Snipes & Kinerly druggists.
