The Charges Against Superintendent Farley -- Leavens Did Not write Them.

Today's Oregonian contains a twocolumn article, written by a reporter who was specially detailed to investigate the origin of the so-called Leavens letters with reference to the charges contained in them reflecting on the integrity and competency of Superintendent Farley, in his management of the construction of the Cascade Portage railroad. The article opens with the following short communication which accompanied the first letter published by the Oregonian. It is in the form of a private note to the editor :

CASCADE LOCKS, Sept. 20, 1891.—[ED-ITOB OREGONIAN.]—Noticing the article referred to, and being upon the ground here, in position to see and learn of the operations of building the state portage railway, have written the inclosed in home a call attention of the beard to the hope to call attention of the board to the incompetency and rottenness of the present officers constructing the road. Unless different men are placed in charge no benefit can accrue to us of Eastern Oregon, They have already engaged officers whose salaries will amount to more than the road can expect to earn. By what authority they engage officers is not known, as their appointments were only for construction. Respect-fully yours, TURNER F. LEAVENS.

The reporter goes on to say that after arriving at the Cascades he found Turner F. Leavens and received the following answers to his questions: "Are you ready to substantiate the charges in your letter of September 20th to the Oregonian?" Mr. Leavens was asked. "I know nothing about it," he replied. "Did you write it?" "No." "Did you sign it?" "No." "Did you authorize any one to write it or sign your name to was seen?" "No." Then Mr. Leavens called attention to the affidavit he pub-Weather forecast till 12 m. lished which has already appeared in these columns with this comment: "In that letter he simply said that the charges made in the letter with his name to it were true but did not say that he wrote the first letter." This is what the CHRONICLE P.M. claimed and knew all the time. Leavens did not write the letters, did not have the information necessary to write them, but some sneaking coward did who was mean enough to make charges under the cover of a stolen name.

James Stanfield, of Hoquiam, with O. F. and Clark Peeler, and Antone Kessner, of Quinafelt, have recently arrived from the Olympic country, having made a excursion far into the mountains, occupying a matter of two weeks from the lake. The cloudy weather almost totally prevented much sight-seeing; but a clear half-day opened up the beauties of that region to their vision very satisfactorily. They had heard of hundreds of lakes, etc., but discounted such tales till their etc., but disconned such tales till their eyes beheld them in every direction when looking from some lofty height. They found parks and glens, bear pas-tures and fields that would pasture elk, deer and cattle for ages. In one large opening, free from trees, the ground was covered with low bushes full of ripe and lucious berries of an unknown versety ucious berries of an unknown variety.
