A stranger shipped a horse up by the Regulator last night and came himself by the Baker to save the extra $1.50. When he came to the Regulator to get his horse he discovered that he was minus a two-dollar blanket that he had probably left behind at Portland in the confusion arising from having shipped his horse on one boat and going himself on another.

It may find to its cost that the his critics that might apply with equal cutting of passenger rates to 50 cents, fitness to some of the same class over between this city and Portland, in order this way. Here it is: to hurt the Regulator will only have the effect of antagonizing the merchants of The Dalles who will retaliate by shipping all eastern freights over the Northern Pacific to Portland.

The best newspapers on the coast, the best people of Klamath county and the leading ladies and gentlemen of Linkville may be mistaken with regard to our little county paper. Editorials of the Star are often honored with space in Klickitat Leader, who from long residence in Klickitat county is in thorough familiarity with her resources estimates that the farmers of his old county will save this year not a dollar less than $150,000 by the Regulator's being on the river. He takes into account the amount of wheat, wool, cattle, hogs and general farm produce shipped from that county, exclusive of the money saved on import freights. Mr. Lee says he has a very poor opinion of the farmers who would for 20 to 25 cents sell themselves to the Union Pacific and allow the to the Union Pacific and allow the Regulator to be driven off the river for lack of patronage. He says that the butter received every week.
