The Chronicle is the Only Paper in The Dalles that Receives the Associated Press Dispatches.

The believer in the modern doctrine of evolution who, denies that the human race originally sprang from one human pair through the fiat of an Almighty Creator and holds that man has evolved himself through natural selection and survival of the fittest from some primordial germ through endless grades of invertebrate and vertebrate being up to his present intelligence and civilization and that the race is still, through like progression in the pathway towards universal righteousness and perfection must get a set back occasionally when he reads accounts like those that reach us from the wreck of the Strathblane that occurred at Long Beach the other day. While train and boat and railway brought hundreds to the scene of the wreck whose sole desire was to save human life, others came to see what they could steal and their shameless piracy paid respect to neither the living nor the dead. The cap of one poor boy whose almost lifeless body was being rolled on a barrel in the effort to bring him back to life, no sooner fell off his head than it was picked up and concealed till a more favorable movement would come for getting away with it altogether. The trunks and valises of the shipwrecked crew, as they floated to the beach, were ruthlessly broken open and robbed of everything valuable and invaluable. Trinkets and souvenirs, of no value to any but the owner, pictures of the loved ones at home, and of the not less loved and lost shared a common fate. It was the old story of the night of The Dalles fire when thousands of dollars worth of property were rescued from the flames and placed on the beach for safety only to be carried off by heartless and conscienceless thieves. It was the old story told under similar circumstances everywhere, until one not blinded by the fiction of evolution is led to question it, under favorable opportunities for theft and concealment, an immense proportion of the human race are not natural born thieves.

We desire to call the attention of advertisers to the superior facilities offered by the CHRONICLE. We make no idle boast when we say that our daily edition reaches three times more readers than any daily paper published in The Dalles, while our weekly edition reaches more readers in this and adjoining counties than any paper published here or elsewhere. The success of the CHRONICLE is phenomenal. Starting out in the teeth of intensely bitter opposition it has won its way to popular favor by simply telling the truth and taking its stand with the masses on all questions relating to their interest. Without a single agent in the field soliciting subscriptions its list of readers is steadily increasing at a rate of from twenty to thirty a week; and the voluntary character of these subscriptions gives ample proof that the paper is appreciated. The CHRONICLE is no longer an experiment but a complete and gratifying success. The necessity of its presence was never more apparent than it is at this moment. Belonging to no clique or party it fears the frown or favor of none. Its mission is to tell the truth. It has come to stay and just so long as truth-telling is wholesome and necessary it expects to remain. Meanwhile there is still room on its subscription list for more names.

The CHRONICLE has long suspected that George Francis Train was editing the Pendleton East Oregonian. The suspicion is now confirmed by proof strong as holy writ, but as it is of no earthly interest to the readers of this journal we refrain from presenting it. Here, however, is one of George's latest pronouncements: "To tax sugar is to raise its value; to tax land [by the single tax system] is to decrease its value." That's enough. The editor of this journal owns a piece of land which he acquires by the labor of his own hands and which he hopes to retain against old age and infirmity should he ever meet them, or—to use a favorite figure of our contemporary—should he become a "tick," and not able to work for a living. The unearned increment is his own by all laws, human and divine, and he does not approve of any system that will decrease its value. And so say we all of us.

Crook county's mineral wealth is slowly but surely being developed. It is only a matter of time when its hidden treasures of gold and silver will be brought to the surface. The numerous complaints that are being made are not all mere glitterings. Some of them will prove to be rich deposits of the precious metals.—Ochoco Review.
