The Chronicle is the Only Paper in The Dalles that Receives the Associated Press Dispatches.

The proud position that the United States occupies among the great nations of the world may be gathered from the fact that the total debt of all the nations of the world is in round numbers, $24,000,000,000, while the total wealth of the United States is $67,000,000,000. If this country were to assume and pay the debt of every other nation of the earth her wealth would still remain greater than that of the German empire, with Holland, Belgium, Norway and Sweden added.

The greater portion of the wheat crop has been hauled. What remains will be carried over till next spring. We congratulate the farmers on the good prices they have received and hope they may get still better prices for what remains unsold.

The Case of W. L. Freeman.

The grand jury has returned "not a true bill" in the case of W. L. Freeman whom the Union Pacific company had indicted for grand larceny, and who was held in the sum of $150, to appear at this term of court. It will be remembered that Mr. Freeman, after having paid what he supposed was the full rate on a stallion from St. Joseph, Missouri, was presented with an additional bill of $35 on arriving at The Dalles. This sum Mr. Freeman refused to pay and on the refusal of the company's agent at this place to deliver up the horse till this amount was paid, Mr. Freeman took the horse out of the car and led him to the residence of the Rev. Mr. Roberts near this city. Having done this Mr. Freeman returned to town, as he says, to see what could be done to have an amicable settlement with the company when he was arrested and held to answer for the crime stated above. The following is Mr. Freeman's account of the affair which has not been published up till now in order that the case might not be complicated in any way before the grand jury:

"After having disposed of my horses in the east I purchased a stallion to bring back with me. This horse being very valuable I went to Mr. J. M. Adist, agent of the Union Pacific at St. Joseph, a short time before shipping, to learn their terms for such a horse to The Dalles. Mr. Adist replied that it was according to what valuation was put upon the horse; that if I would value the horse to the company, in case of accident for $100 the cost of shipping would be $70, that in case of a wreck if the horse got killed I would only get $100 from the company if I shipped him at this rate, that if I valued him at $200 it would cost me $125 and if higher I would have to make a special contract with the agent at Omaha. Thinking that one or two hundred dollars would be no recompense for such a horse I concluded to take the risk on myself and ship him at a valuation of $100. The horse was at first loaded in a low car that bumped his head. When I saw this I went to the freight office and asked for a higher car. The man I addressed, who seemed to be acting as agent came and took a look at the car and on seeing the cramped condition of the horse ordered a higher car, remarking as he looked at the horse: "That is a good horse." This same man who had thus seen the horse and knew what he was, made out my contract, and I paid him what it called for—$70 and started for home. No one inspected the horse at any time after till I came to The Dalles. When I got to Julesburg, Colorado, I unloaded the horse and kept him there two days and one night. I arrived in The Dalles, without any further stop, on Friday night about ten o'clock. The horse was side-tracked over by the old steam laundry and left there till the following morning, when I went to the yard master and tried to get him to run the car up to the stock yards platform where I could unload. The yard-master informed me he had orders to sidetrack the car where the horse could not be unloaded till the charges were paid. I told him there were no charges, that all was paid. I requested that the company unload the horse and keep him at my expense till the matter of charges was settled but this was refused and the car was again moved to a place where it could not be unloaded. I waited till nearly seven o'clock a. m., and seeing no chance to get the horse unloaded and fearing I might lose him by leaving him so long confined without rest or exercise, I concluded to jump him out on the track and did so, taking him up to the barn of Mr. E. P. Roberts. Then I returned to town to see if I could straighten out the matter with the agent and when within one block of the depot I was arrested together with my father under the charge of grand larceny. The rest is now known. Justice Doherty dismissed the charge against my father and bound me over in the sum of $150 to appear before the grand jury with the result stated above. I make this statement that the people may judge for themselves who was to blame.

W. L. FREEMAN.

Circuit Court Proceedings.

The case of Jonathan Morrison vs. the W. H. McAtee estate which occupied the court till nearly midnight yesterday was submitted to the jury this morning and a verdict rendered for the plaintiff of $1392.

The case of the state vs. Robert Alexander, indicted for larceny of a watch was then taken up and is still occupying the court as we go to press.

The attorneys interested in the cases of the state against the Jordan boys, found guilty of horse stealing have made formal application to Judge Bradshaw to have them sent to the state reform school. This is the best possible thing that can be done with these boys who to our own personal knowledge and that of many others in Wasco county were brought up under a family influence that naturally tended to make them turn out as they have done.

The grand jury went out this afternoon to visit the county poor house.
