The Chronicle is the Only Paper in The Dalles that Receives the Associated Press Dispatches.

It is due to the state agricultural college to say that the members of the faculty who go out over the country holding farmers' institutes, seem thoroughly devoted to the interests of their several departments of labor and to the general success and prosperity of the college. We believe this school offers to the sons of the farmers of the state advantages not to be found in other institutions of learning, in the way of acquiring a thorough knowledge of cultivating the soil, besides imbuing them with the love of farm life and the dignity of farm labor. It is beyond question that the attendance of farmers' sons at the higher institutions of learning has the general tendency of weaning them from the farm and driving them to the cities and towns under the foolish impression that it is more honorable to stand behind a dry goods' counter and wear store clothes than to enjoy the manly independence of the farm life, albeit clothed betimes in jeans and overalls. It is a matter of record that only a very small per cent. of farmers' sons who are educated at merely literary colleges go back to farm life, while of those educated at agricultural colleges the vast majority are content to remain on the farm. Institutions whose labors have a tendency to dignify labor and keep young men from the temptations and vices of city life have a right to our respect and encouragement.

The first resolution adopted by the state alliance recently held at Dayton would lead one to infer that the average hayseed bird is never likely to be caught with "Single tax" chaff. The very fact that the Washington law, that exempts notes and accounts from taxation, is so far in line with the single tax system that proposes to tax nothing but land, induces the members of the Washington alliance to put themselves on record as they do in the preamble of the resolution in the following fashion:

Whereas, our state constitution guarantees to us a system of taxation, just and equal and in as much as our late legislature did pass a revenue law very objectionable in that it appears to be a step in the direction of "single tax system" putting the burdens of taxation upon the farmers and home builders of the state by exempting the property of the wealthy and then to palliate the crime perpetrated did exempt from taxation personal property in the paltry sum of $300, as if this would bribe the masses to be silent under the outrage."

The Union Pacific has at last scored a point against the D. P. and A. N. company that we hope the latter company will not be long in wiping out. The agent of the Union Pacific has become the father of a fifteen pound boy! When shall we be able to make a record like this for the agent of the Regulator?

The Farmers' Institute.
 The third session of the Farmers' Institute opened Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock with a good attendance. After music by the choir an essay was read by J. Trout on "Education and Reform and how best to obtain them." Mr. Trout's paper dealt chiefly with the subject of the nation's finances and advocated the views on coinage and currency usually held by the farmers' alliance. After a short and animated discussion a selection of music was admirably rendered by the pupils of the Dufur graded school, followed by a recitation by Master Charles Percy. Then came a very able lecture on "The farmer and his horse" by M. J. Anderson, which was listened to with marked attention and which received the distinction of a special vote of thanks at its close. This lecture was replete with instructions regarding the treatment of this most valuable and useful of all domestic animals, chiefly as it relates to horse-shoeing and care of the horses' feet. Then followed a comic recitation by Clark Bolton on "Michael Schneider's party" which was well received. Then came two musical selections by the school pupils after which the meeting adjourned till 1:30 o'clock.

The afternoon session was opened by the entire audience rising to their feet and singing "Work for the night is coming" when Professor French read a valuable paper on "Industrial Education." The professor claimed that the mind as well as the hand must be trained. This was a foundation feature of the Agricultural college—to combine manual labor and mental training so as to make labor pleasant as well as profitable. This was followed by a reading by Miss Smith, after which P. P. Underwood and D. Farrington read two short but suggestive and valuable essays on "Summer Fallowing." Facts and figures were given which proved beyond the shadow of a question that the farmers of Wasco county must resort to summer fallowing if they expect to reap the best results. It was generally agreed that the remedy for dry seasons was, to a large extent, in the farmer's own hands. In the discussion that followed these papers, questions relating to deep or shallow plowing, planting corn or potatoes on summer fallow, leaving the fallow rough or smooth, cultivating the fallow, and second plowing and many others were asked and answered and a good deal of practical information was elicited.

This was followed by a recitation by Miss Eva Vanderpool after which Professor Frazer read a valuable paper on "Zoology and botany in our public schools." The professor ably contended that no education is complete that does not embrace the whole man, in his physical as well as mental constitution. Ed Harriman then followed with a short but suggestive paper, in which he took the affirmative of the question, "Should the principles of agriculture be taught in our public schools?" Mr. Harriman contended that the common schools should be furnished with a few acres of ground by means of which pupils might be trained in some of the simpler principles of agricultural science. A little caustic criticism on ventilation in our public schools by Miss Snell brought Professor Frazer to his feet only to find that he had his match in the ringing, clear-cut and incisive replies of the female professor. The meeting then adjourned to meet for its last session at seven o'clock.

Mosier Items.
 MOSIER, Or., Nov. 25, 1891.
 Editor of the Chronicle:
 New settlers are still dropping in from unknown regions, and all seem to stop in and about Mosier precinct. Mosier is a small place, and is not much heard from, but, Mr. Editor, I want to tell you that it is the place where they turn out the coin. Mosier precinct is all business and of course, like unto a business man, knows its own business.

The young gentlemen of Mosier seem to think that weddings will be a common occurrence here this fall and if the young gentlemen think so, there must be some truth in the assertion. I see in an item of one your correspondents that a certain man brags on having one of the finest stands of wheat in his neighborhood. I would say that we have very nice stands of wheat here, but when it comes to talking about wheat we are not in it; money is our main crop here. The Mt. Hood Literary society is gliding along very smoothly. The society publishes a paper also but the name of the paper is hardly fit for the society though it would be first-class for the district. You will learn the name of the paper by the following clipping of poetry taken from the same:

Mr. President, Ladies and Gents that's assembled in this hall,
 This is the night for me upon which to make a call.
 You must excuse my overtures, it isn't very rich,
 But please do remember that this is my baby speech.

As there was no motion made in favor of a name, it didn't make much difference to the paper just the same.
 My editor, that's living down the hollow of Dry creek,
 Thought it was best to call me the LITERARY KICK.

The LITERARY KICK, isn't that a pretty name, O'er which I hope the members won't feel any ashamed.

It's very short; besides it is easy to pronounce, But if you should dislike it give the editor the bounce.

And if you think that I can't kick I'll tell you what to do:
 Go down to Lynch and get me a No. 11 shoe.
 As sure as I was born, a week ago tonight,
 I'll kick everything to pieces before it gets in sight.

Should the Mountaineer, the Chronicle or Sun Upon me try to level their political gun,
 They will be very sorry when they hear my bugle sound;
 I'll make it hotter for them than the fire that burned their town.

Miss Emily Husbands went to The Dalles on Tuesday and will be a guest of Mrs. S. L. Young's while there. Will return to her home at Mosier in a few days.

I must say that the most fearless set of engineers run on the Union Pacific between The Dalles and Portland of any other road in the world. I presume that if they knew the rotten condition of all the old trestles on which they pass over every day they would not be quite so much so, for they really do carry their lives over on a mere piece of cobweb, when they go over such trestles.

Mrs. Capt. McNulty was a guest of Mr. Edgar Husbands and Mr. J. J. Lynch on Thursday the 19th.

Mr. Nevens, a grange lecturer, delivered a lecture in the Columbia grange on Tuesday evening the 24th inst.

I wish to state that the Mosier grange meets next Saturday, November 28th, which is a regular meeting and I also want to say to all the brothers and sisters that they must turn out as there are hopes of work to be done. One or two members are also to be taken in. Don't forget to come out, for I am a correspondent from Mosier grange and want something to talk about. M. G.
