The connection between the church and the state is producing its usually bitter fruit in Brazil where the clergy have become aggressively hostile to the republic which they never liked and are engaged in machinations for the restoration of a Catholic house of Braganza. Their feelings of hostility have been intensified by the irregularity in the payment of their salaries. When the empire was overthrown the federal government engaged to pay all salaries to the existing church functionaries and to support the chairs of the seminaries for one year, leaving the provinces to do as much more as they pleased, in the interest of religion. In most of the provinces have done nothing and where priests have died their altars have remained vacant. The Brazilians, accustomed to voluntary contributions for clerical support, are neglecting their religion and the church sees the people gradually slipping away from it. These circumstances have tended to intensify the attachment of the clergy to the imperial family which always provided liberally for the church. On the other hand the government, recognizing the hostility of the clergy, instead of adopting measures of conciliation is said to have determined, on the assembling of congress, to abolish all responsibility for their maintenance. If this course is pursued it is hard to tell what results may follow among a clergy and people wholly unused to the custom of supporting religion by voluntary contribution. It is certain the clergy will not surrender the privileges they have so long enjoyed without a bitter struggle that may seriously test the stability of the young republic.

It is a hard matter to regulate the liquor traffic where public sentiment is not in full sympathy with the movement. Some weeks ago an Anti-Sunday Saloon Association composed of ministers and church members was formed in Tacoma and about twenty-five arrests of saloon keepers from different parts of the city were made for violating the statute requiring the saloons to be closed on Sunday. In two of the cases when brought to trial the jury failed to agree. One or two others were carried up after the conviction and the decision of the lower court sustained. Twenty-two remained on the docket up till last Tuesday when prosecuting attorney Claypool moved to have them dismissed as the matter would be taken up some time in the future in another form. The result on the whole has not been encouraging to the prosecution.

After several weeks of hard work the two solicitors sent out by Portland to raise subscriptions for the world's fair exhibit have succeeded in obtaining only $2200 in cash and promissory notes, chiefly notes. Much interest and some enthusiasm, we are told, was manifested but not much money was forthcoming, and it takes money to make exhibits. Now Portland has had another meeting and has passed a new set of resolutions to raise $50,000 and the rest of Oregon will wait with bated breath to see if these resolutions were business or only wind.

The latest enormity perpetrated by that wicked invention of Bill McKinley, the McKinley Bill, happened the other day in Northern Ohio where one of the proprietors of a large woolen mill was adjudged insane and committed to an asylum. His peculiar form of madness consisted in imagining that he had become enormously wealthy since the new tariff law placed an increased duty on wool, whereas we are assured he had actually become poorer and as an esteemed contemporary says: The McKinley Bill was the thing that "hoodooed" him.

A statement recently prepared by the treasury department shows that there has been a net increase of $12,789,909 in the circulation since the 15th of November. The per capita circulation on December is stated at $24.38.

Steel Mackay, the actor, is working on a scheme to build a 400x600 opera house and theatre at the world's fair. He is backed by London and New York capitalists to the amount of a million and a half.

ALL SORTS.
 Senator Warren, of Wyoming, seems proud of the fact that he was once a sheep herder. We see no reason why he should not be. There is nothing dishonorable in the calling of a sheep herder.

It is believed that there are traces in the animal kingdom of a law that fixes the extreme duration of life at five times that of growth. This latter period in man may be said to average 21 years; hence the full span of a perfectly healthy man's life should range from 100 to 105 years.

Oregon girls take the "cake" when it comes to "buckarooing." Last week a band of cattle and an emigrant wagon from Oregon, bound for—God only knows where, passed through Wheatland with two good-looking web-footed girls driving cattle, riding straddle and sitting in the saddle with as much ease and grace as the most accomplished vaquero.—Field and Farm.

For the honor of the state it is to be hoped that the report is untrue that Joseph Simon is likely to be a successful applicant for the ninth judicial circuit federal judgeship. Some things hard to justify have been done, but this would be inhuman, and the suggestion is regarded with abhorrence by all who rightly review the facts in the case.—Astorian.

First drummer—I am representing the Thunderbolt rain producing company—our showers last two hours and twenty minutes, and we make a sample shower free of charge. Second drummer—Let me take your order, sir for the Aquarius artificial rain-making company—our rain is superior to anything in the market and we give a silk umbrella and a pair of gum boots with every shower.

Gov. Jones, of Alabama, spoke at Blue Creek mines last week, led in a dance afterward, and kissed the boss miner's wife once. Capt. Kolb, his opponent for the nomination, spoke later at the same place, led the dance afterward, and kissed the boss miner's wife twice. We should not be surprised if the boss miner is not tired and weary of that kind of business, and will keep his family secluded during future political campaigns.

Charles Goodnight, the cattle baron of Texas, and probably one of the best posted cattlemen in the United States, while in Trinidad the other day was credited by one of the papers of that city, with making the statement that the number of cattle on the range had been reduced to such an extent during the last few years, that a reaction in the direction of bigger prices would soon set in. He gave it as his opinion that in the entire state of Texas, today, there is not a train-load of three-year-old steers, and that when the scarcity begins to be felt, up will go the prices. Mr. Goodnight is in a position to know what he is talking about.
