The Chronicle is the Only Paper in The Dalles that Receives the Associated Press Dispatches.

A telegram from Washington informs us that Senator Allen is preparing a bill to provide for the repayment to settler within the forty-mile limit of forfeited lands of the Northern Pacific road all money over $1.25 an acre. The price paid for all lands proved up by cash entries was $2.50 an acre. Now that the lands comprising the odd sections have been forfeited to the government and settlers on these lands allowed to purchase them at $1.25 an acre, it is only just and right that those who made cash entries within the railroad limits, years ago, and through toil and privation gave value to the surrounding lands, should be put on an equality with those who came later when the lands had become more valuable.

The Spokane Review gives the following sensible bit of advice to farmers who feel that they are entitled to greater representation in the control of the government. Take the primaries of the old parties into your own hands and see that farmers are sent to the conventions. That done, there will be no difficulty in sending more farmers to congress. This would not exactly suit the political farmers who have been running the alliance into the ground and perverting its purpose, but it would be more satisfactory to the agricultural farmers.

"There are three things," said a gentleman of this city yesterday, in the hearing of the writer, "that during the past year have done more for The Dalles and Wasco county and are calculated to do more for them in the future than anything they ever possessed and these three are the Regulator, The Dalles water system and the CHRONICLE.

The folly of banking too much on what politicians will do is well illustrated in the case of those tariff reform papers that "went their whole pile" on Mills for speaker and contended that his defeat would indicate an abandonment of the true democratic position on the tariff question. What will these gentlemen say now?

The San Francisco Examiner prints a glaring lottery advertisement once or twice a month and to evade the postal law that prohibits lottery matter being carried through the mails, distributes its paper by express on the days that it does so.

The CHRONICLE is the only paper in town that had sufficient enterprise to get the president's message by telegraph and give it out to the people from fourteen to twenty hours before they could see it through any other source.

The present session of congress will be a game of points and the party that makes the least number of mistakes will be the gainer.

How to Get Ice.
 Last winter we had a new experience in putting up ice, which, perhaps, will be of interest. The ice crop was short, and when our supply was about half stored, the la grippe came among us, and by the time it went away the weather was not suitable for making ice. This gave Mr. L. a chance to work out a theory which he had in mind for years, namely: He took drifted snow and put it into the ice-house, packing each load and wetting it with water from the well, finishing up each night with all the water the snow would take. When full and frozen it was covered with sawdust, the same as ice. The house is not a perfect one by any means, still the snow lasted till used up, which was the 20th of September. The verdict is that snow is preferred to hauling ice far.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Those Funny Marks.
 Chicago Tribune.
 "I never saw such writing as George's is," said the beautiful young girl, as she held an envelope up for inspection of her married friend.
 "It is rather illegible," was the reply.
 "Oh, I don't mean that," was the quick response. "He puts such funny marks in it. You know he's only written me three or four letters since we've been engaged because he's been in the city all the time, but when he does write one it looks so funny. It's all filled with marks like this, 'x,' and then he makes character 'ands,' like '&,' and puts a ring around them. And then at the end of all his sentences he puts a cross like this, 'x.' Then when he makes a figure, he makes a ring around it and always draws two lines under his signature. And sometimes he draws a line down through capital letters, and once crossed a word out and then drew a ring around it and marked it 'setet.' It's awful funny. I can't make anything out of it."

"My dear," said the married woman, as quietly as her excitement would allow, "have you no suspicions?"
 "Suspicious!" exclaimed the beautiful young girl in alarm. "No, no. Of what?"
 "Has he never confessed?" persisted the married woman with Spartan firmness.
 "George confess!" cried the fair maiden.
 "Martha, you alarm me! Are they counterfeiters' marks?"
 "Worse," was the solemn answer. "Ether, your husband will be out nights. He will come in at all hours. Most of his work will be done under the cover of darkness. He will miss his dinners and will be constantly changing the hours. He cannot be depended on to be at home at any certain time. Ethel, the man you are engaged to is a newspaper man!"

"No, no, it cannot be!" cried the dark-eyed beauty. "I will not believe it!"
 "Ethel!" she was very impressive, "did he ever draw a straight line through all the pages of a letter?"
 "Yes, and it was one of the best he ever wrote."
 "Alas! Ethel, it is too true. He is a newspaper man, and he has absent-mindedly put in the marks for the printer. Poor girl! Try as he might he couldn't conceal his identity."
 Then the young girl cried "Horrible!" and burst into tears and refused to be comforted.

A Colored Sam Jones.
 Atlanta Constitution.
 "Uncle" Jason is a negro preacher, who, in his way, is as original as Sam Jones. He recently preached a sermon in which he said that during a trance he was taken to heaven and while there he saw the Methodists, the Presbyterians and the Episcopalians "way off to one side."
 "An' whar wur de Baptist?" asked a brother in the congregation.
 "Dey wur rite at de throne," said Uncle Sason.
 "How dey cum dar?"
 "Well, de Lawd say de Baptis' am such onreliable rascals he has to keep 'em whar he kin git hands on 'em."

A Young Tough.
 From the Detroit Free Press:
 A small boy on Sixth street hates the washing process worse than snakes hate liquor. His mother was scrubbing him and he was kicking.
 "Why don't you be a good boy?" she begged. "Don't you know you'll go to the bad place if you are not?"
 "There ain't any water there, is there?" he asked.
 "Not a drop," she answered, solemnly. "Then I guess I'll keep on being bad," and he kept on.

The Salt Lake Tribune says: "Oregon is in some respects a greater state than California. In many species of fruit she is superior to California; she has immense wheat fields, endless ranges and no end of timber."
