A RELIGIOUS CRANK. Scheme of the Man Arrested for Annoying President Harrison.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 14.—Inquiry at Homestead, a suburb of Pittsburgh, shows that Charles Henry William Hogg, who was arrested at Washington last Friday for annoying President Harrison, is a crank of very large ideas. He came to Homestead last spring and remained until September. He did not seek employment, and seemed to have enough money on which to live comfortably. He sought the society of the clergymen of the town and unfolded to them the scheme which was uppermost in his mind. He said that all religious societies at present in existence are founded on wrong ideas, and that peace will not come to the world until all the churches are destroyed, and one grand central edifice erected with branches of the same kind in every town. He said he had been appointed to be master architect, and that all who assisted in the enterprise would be saints. He left for Washington with the express purpose of interesting President Harrison in his project. While at Homestead Hogg conducted himself as a gentleman, and was considered harmless.

BROKE IN THE JAIL.

And Shot Two Men Charged With Being Rioters.

WAS A NIGHT OF TERRORS.

Adventures in the China Sea on Board a Merchant Vessel.

THE RELIGIOUS CRANK AGAIN.

The Scheme of the Man Who Was Arrested for Annoying President Harrison.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Dec. 14.—The Ware county jail was broken into yesterday morning about 2 o'clock by a mob of fifty masked men, who went to the cell containing Welcome Golden and Robert Knight, leaders of the Varna riot, and shot them dead. The sheriff was called up by a man named Johnson, who said he had a prisoner that he wished to put in jail. The prisoner, he said, had killed his son-in-law, and asked to be locked up as a protection against lynchers. The sheriff accompanied Mr. "Johnson" to the jail, where he found three men sitting on the steps. As the sheriff approached the party jumped up and presented their Winchester, saying "Consider yourselves under arrest." The sheriff drew his pistol and was caught by one of the men. They then demanded that he should unlock the jail, but he refused. About fifty masked men, who had been concealed behind the building, then appeared, and the sheriff still persisting in his refusal to open the doors, they deputized four of their number to take him back to his house and guard him there. On the way back he got away from them and sent word to Waycross, summoning the military company and the police. By the time these had arrived, however, the mob had completed its work and departed.

A NIGHT OF TERROR. Adventures in the China Sea on Board a Merchant Vessel.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 14.—George Merchant, mate of the ill-fated schooner Pearl, that was run down in the China sea August 5 by a large steamer, is in the city, on his way to visit his brother at Fresno. He says the Pearl was a small schooner employed in trading around the Philippine islands, but on the last voyage was bound to Hong Kong from Pamy. The schooner carried a crew of six. When within about eighty miles of her destination, on the night of August 5, it was blowing a strong gale and the schooner was hoove to. Merchant and a seaman named May were on deck when the lights of a large steamer were seen coming straight for the Pearl. May ran to the cabin hatch and got a flare, but before he could light it the steamer crashed into the schooner, nearly cutting her in two. May's arm was broken and he was badly hurt internally. The rest of the crew were asleep and were no doubt killed in their bunks. Merchant succeeded in cutting the only boat afloat, and by almost superhuman efforts got it over the rail into the water. The two men had barely time to get into the boat when the schooner went down head first. They shouted frantically for aid, but the steamer kept on her way and the two castaways were left to their fate. They had neither food nor water and only a single pair of oars. May died at daylight and Merchant soon became delirious and insensible. He was rescued by a Chinese junk and taken to Hong Kong, proceeding thence to Victoria by the steamer Empress of China. He fell overboard during the voyage, but was quickly rescued.
