The Welland Canal. THE DALLES, Jan. 18, 1892. Editor Chronicle:

The Welland canal is twenty-seven miles long. It connects Lake Erie with Lake Ontario. It has a capacity for boats of 1500 ton burthen. It enables moderate-sized sea-going boats to reach all harbors on sea coasts with cargoes loaded at Duluth, the western shore of Lake Superior. The Clyde-built steamers Alberta and Athabaska are tain a treatise on prize fighting. running on Lake Superior and the whalebacks Wetmore and Keenawa, built at West Superior, Wis., are now on the Pacific ocean. If the Cascade Locks were opened, during the greater part of the year moderate-sized sea-going vessels could reach The Dalles, and with a portage railroad here as a temporary expedient the products of the inland empire could be shipped direct to any sea coast market in the world. Wake up, ye people of Oregon, Washington and Idaho and strive for the early completion of the Cascade Locks and place the inland empire where the God of nature designed her to be. L. H.

DISMISSED THE CASE.

A Pointer for Police Judge Osbstrn.

It happened in Oregon some time ago. There wasn't a preacher in the place, and when an exceedly raw young man and woman desired to get married the services of the police judge were called true western enterprise he agreed to tackle the job and the culprits were brought before him. "Stand up," he said, as they seated hemselves, and they stood up.

"Come forward to the bar of justice," he continued with a pompous effort, and they came.

"Guilty or not guilty?" he asked as they stood before him holding hands. ,'Guilty, your honor," responded the

"Is this your first offense?"

"It is, your honor, so help me," "Well, there's nothing to do but impose a life sentence on both of you and assess the groom for the costs."

"How much, your honor?" asked the groom, going down into his pockets. "Ten dollars."

The groom handed it over.

"Case is dismissed," announced the judge, and the innocent young things marched out of the room as radiant as a June morning when the sunlight kisses the roses until they blush again.
